GSU students join others in model UN debate

"You can't just blame one country. It has to be give and take..."
"You recognize a state that doesn't have a legitimate government. That's dangerous!"
"There's a question of what direction Arafat is going..."

No, it's not a TV news commentary show, but it is a true accounting of debate by GSU students and others at the Model United Nations simulation on the GSU campus Feb. 18.

Led by Dr. Larry Levinson, professor of political science, GSU students teamed with students from the University of Illinois-Chicago, Triton College and North Central College for the afternoon of debate as United Nations delegates from 13 countries would have done.

The topics weren't easy -- the recognition of a Palestinian state and sending a U.N. peacekeeping mission to Afghanistan -- but they aren't new to these students.

GSU students didn't know which U.N. nation they'd represent until they arrived that afternoon, but Levinson said it isn't difficult for them to get into the mind-set of countries like Senegal, China and Great Britain because they meet weekly and discuss the top issues in the news. These students are also very well read, Levinson said.

Annual alumni phonathon begins on March 5

The annual alumni phonathon begins next Sunday, and Ginni Burghardt, GSU alumni director, is still looking for volunteers to help handle the daily telephoning. Faculty and staff may call extension 2215 or 2216 to volunteer.

The phonathon continues through March 23 and calling will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sundays and from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Mondays through Fridays. Snacks and refreshments are provided for the Sunday afternoon sessions and dinner and refreshments are provided for the evening callers.

"The Civil Service Senate has committed to fill the 20 phones on two evenings, Wednesday, March 8, and Thursday, March 9," Ginni said. She explained that Civil Service staffers should call Chris Tolbertt at extension 2586 if they wish.

to volunteer.
Callers from the University Library will fill the phones on March 15, Ginni said.
This year the Alumni Association's board of directors has designated funds raised from the phonathon to support faculty development, scholarships, and the library, Burghardt said.
She said "additional funds raised will be earmarked for the child care center, equipment for handicapped students and other university priorities."

Employee of the Month

SAS word processing operator traveled a long road to GSU

By Marilyn Thomas
How does the girl from "down on the farm" find her way to Governors State where her talents and abilities win her the February "Employee of the Month" award?
It wasn't too hard a road, says Sherry Kohl, word processing operator III for Student Affairs and Services (SAS).
Sherry grew up in the farming community of Galva, about 2 1/2 hours drive west of GSU on I-80. Galesburg was the "big city" for her in those days. Her parents owned a farm, and Sherry did her share of bean-picking and other chores.
Just after high school graduation she met her husband, Harold, who'd come to Galva to work for a farming-related business after graduating from Joliet Junior College. He'd been raised on a farm in Mokena. About a year after their introductions, the two were married and Harold ended up in the Air Force.
Sherry remembers it as a wonderful time. Her husband didn't like the military, but they both enjoyed the moves that gave them a chance to live in Tucson, San Francisco and Washington.
After the service, the Kohls moved back to Galva where Harold worked for a fertilizer company. Then he decided to take advantage of his GI Bill benefits and the family moved to the campus of Western Illinois University where he completed his degree. Besides working full and part-time jobs, Sherry took courses in computers, word processing and business communications while they were at WIU.
After Harold's graduation, the couple and their two sons moved to New Lenox and today he's farming. "I always told myself I'd never marry a farmer," she laughs.
The family moved to New Lenox nearly five years ago, and Sherry was hired by GSU shortly after that. Even though she'd had computer courses, Sherry said it was the "on the job" intensive training those first two weeks at GSU that gave the hands-on experience she'd never gotten in her computer classes.
Sherry is the word processor for all of SAS which includes Dean of Students Cathy Taylor, and the offices of Financial Aid, Admissions and Student Recruitment, Student Development, Student Life, Career Planning and Placement and the Registrar's Office.
"The five units of SAS are very fortunate to benefit from the high quality of Sherry's work," Ursula Sklan of ASR said in her nomination. "Not only does (the work) look excellent, but it is done willingly and with great speed.
"Our units, especially admissions, give her long reports and publications to type; they always come back to us in record time, and Sherry makes corrections willingly and quickly," Sklan added. "She has a very good attitude."
Sherry admits the workload can be intense at times, but she will give herself breaks. Her lunch hours are planned out each semester: volleyball on Tuesdays and Thursdays and exercise on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
"I love the volleyball," she said. She used to play on a ladies team in New Lenox and really got into the sport. The game here at GSU is just as much fun, she said, because it's not taken too seriously.
Those on staff who don't know Sherry personally have probably all had a peak into her office near the cashier's windows.

GSU prof uses mini-grant to study nature's makeup

We all enjoy looking at nature's beauty. The same holds true for Dr. Richard Fries in the CAS Division of Science, but he's going a step further. With a GSU mini-grant, Fries is doing research on the intricacies of nature's makeup by studying the chlorophyll processes.

Chlorophyll is the green photosynthetic coloring matter of plants, but how it functions in molecule clusters and how chlorophyll builds its clusters are questions Fries is investigating. He plans to modify chlorophyll into small crystalline units and then take those units to develop new chlorophyll compounds. He hopes to be able to determine how the reaction of the first molecule of the cluster affects the actions of the rest of the molecules in the cluster.

Fries said the organic biochemistry work of making purified derivatives of chlorophyll can be done in the GSU lab, but the work of determining how light causes a chain reaction in the clusters will probably be done at Argonne National Laboratory where a laser spectrophotometer is available.

Dr. Donaldson receives voc-ed special recognition

Dr. Robert Donaldson of the CBPA Division of Public Administration has been named "Friend of Vocational Education" by the Illinois Vocational Association. He received the award at the group's Feb. 17 annual meeting in Springfield.

Donaldson was honored for his work as the university's coordinator of occupational education programs, for his liaison on behalf of GSU with the University Council of Vocational Education, and for his lobbying efforts before the Illinois legislature for adequate funding for vocational education.

Pair becomes new GSU 'stars of the airwaves'

GSU's latest "stars of the airwaves" are Dr. Leon Zalewski of the CE Division of Education, and Dick Pride, director of admissions and student recruitment.

Zalewski is moderator and facilitator for a science curriculum development program originating from GSU but airing in Springfield for a Feb. 28 videoconference to teachers and administrators from Illinois' smaller school districts.

Pride will appear on the Lake County, Ind., Channel 56 on March 15 as a guest on the "College Bound" program explaining GSU's curricula, financial aid, student body makeup and support services.

GSU Musical Ambassadors offering 'open mike'

The GSU Musical Ambassadors are giving you a chance to fulfill your secret desires to perform.

As part of the CAS Division of Fine and Performing Arts "Festival of Arts" March 9-11, the Ambassadors are hosting an "Open Mike Evening" beginning at 7:30 p.m. on March 9 in E Lounge.

Musicians and singers can perform solo or as participants in jam sessions.

Day Care kids ready to 'hop' for a worthy cause

"Hop to it!" say the children from the GSU Day Care Center who will be hopping for United Cerebral Palsy at 10 a.m. March 1 in the Hall of Governors.

The Springtime Bunny will be joining them in this annual fundraising activity. The two-minute hop is the children's symbolic way of helping others.

Those who want to join them can make pledges to the United Cerebral Palsy that morning or send checks made payable to United Cerebral Palsy to the Child Care Center.

Worker finds GSU at end of long road

"There isn't a trimester that goes by without someone coming in to complement me on my plants. One lady asked me how I managed to keep them so green!" -- a comment Sherry really thought was funny since the patio scene is a reproduction on wallpaper.

Outside of work, Sherry is active at St. John United Church of Christ in Mokena where she teaches Bible study and volunteers for other programs and events.

YMCA schedules Yoga class for GSU employees

Would you like to relax?

Beginning Feb. 28 a twice-weekly Hatha-YOGA class will be offered by the YMCA from noon to 1 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The leader, Karen Neilson, suggests participants wear loose, comfortable closing such as warm-ups, and bring a towel or small blanket.

Cost is $32 per person for YMCA members.

Model UN comes to GSU

In 1988, GSU represented Zimbabwe at the Regional Midwest Model United Nations Conference, and this year Levinson will lead a delegation of nine students to New York for the national model U.N. conference where they'll represent Sao Tome and Principe, two islands off the coast of Africa that make up one tiny non-aligned nation. Their trip March 21-25 is funded in part by the GSU Alumni Association and the Office of Student Life.
