New Sculpture Nears Completion

Bodark Arc, the new site-specific sculpture which was designed and is being constructed by sculpture Martin Puryear will soon take its place as one of the attractions of the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park.

The work, with its carved cedar arch installed, and walkway spanning the edge of one of GSU's small lakes, waits for placement of a bronze ceremonial chair which Puryear designed and is building similar to African models. This will complete the final stage of construction.

Starkly visible in its place between Strautmanis' Phoenix and diSuvero's Prairie Chimes, Puryear's "Arc," while not monumental in size, is distinctly impressive. A semi-circular footpath begins and ends at the hedgerow of osage orange (also known as bois d'arc, hence the title) just beyond the lake. This circular path is marked at its apex by an arch over a smaller intersecting footpath leading back to the hedgerow where the chair becomes the focal point of this site-specific work.

Funded by GSU Foundation monies derived from private donations, the sculpture should prove a fitting addition to an already unique art collection.
Photography Lecture Series
Nine professional photographers, each an expert in his/her own specialty, will present a series of free monthly lectures during the 1982-83 academic year at GSU sponsored by Infinity Photographers Association, a student organization.
Barbara DeGenevieve, University of Illinois assistant professor of photography will lead off on Friday, September 17, at 7:00 pm. For the past five years, her photography has been involved with ideas about contemporary sexuality, i.e. male nudity, sexual myths and stereotypes, childhood taboos and male and female attitudes toward sexuality.
DeGenevieve holds a BA in fine arts from Wilkes College, the MS in art education from Southern Connecticut State College and the MA and MFA degrees in photography from University of New Mexico. She has been teaching photography and art for most of the past 13 years, and has participated in nearly 60 exhibits from coast to coast in the past nine years, many of them solo, winning numerous prizes and awards.
Each of the monthly lectures will be on Friday evening through next June except for a break in December.
Infinity Photographers Association is one of the largest student groups on the GSU campus and is responsible for Infinity Gallery, which has monthly displays of photographic art from local as well as nationally-known photographers.

GSU Alumni Put Fund Campaign Over the Top
Nearly 1,000 alumni of Governors State University have contributed $16,000 during the 1982 annual fund-raising campaign to post a 9% gain over last year's total, according to Ginni Burghardt, alumni director.
Records were set in several categories, she stated. Three donors of $250 became eligible for the President's Club, compared with one last year. Century Club members ($100 donation) increased to 14 from 5 in 1981. Alumni Club members ($50) totaled 18, the same as in 1981.
Given the fact that GSU is a regional commuter University, it is interesting to note that donations came to us from as far away as Greece, Nigeria, Israel, Canada, Alaska, Puerto Rico and many states far from Illinois," Burghardt said.
Most of the money was raised through a phonathon held this past spring. The top six fund raisers were Sam Ogrizovich, Peotone; Gerald Bannon, Summit; Don Hanson, Richton Park; Jack Donohue, Park Forest; Inta Sraders, Glenwood; and Jane Burghardt, Park Forest.
The proceeds of the drive will be used for campus beautification projects for which state funds are not available, the alumni director stated.

Graduate Students Exhibit Works
The art galleries of GSU will feature the works of two graduate students during the month of September.
John Mueller, Glen Ellyn, graduate student in photography, will show a collection of his works entitled "End of the Golden Era" in the Infinity Gallery located on the second floor of the College of Arts and Sciences. Depicting the heyday of passenger train travel, the photos will be on display from 8:30 am to 5:00 pm weekdays through September 27.
Marcia Glesener, Steger, graduate student in printmaking, will exhibit her works under the title of "Soaring Things That Fly" in the Visual Arts Gallery on the first floor of B Wing. Gallery hours are 10:30 am to 4:30 pm weekdays. The prints will be on display September 13-29.
Admission to view both exhibits is free.

Repairs Almost Complete on GSU Main Entrance
Repairs which got underway last August are in their final stages. Sounds of air hammers, which have been a source of mixed emotions among students and staff will soon be stillled. The happy result of all the noise, dust and confusion is a refurbished GSU main entrance, new curbing and the disappearance of ankle-turning holes in cement work, product of a few hard winters of snow and deep-freezing with the inevitable thawing.
GSU Music Man Gains Four National Honors

Dr. Warrick Carter, chairman of the Division of Fine and Performing Arts at Governors State University, has recently gained several national honors recognizing his prominent position among American music educators.

Carter has been elected president of the National Association of Jazz Educators for a two year term. NAJE is comprised of teachers and students of jazz from elementary through higher education. The GSU professor is a long-time member of the association and has served for six years on the executive board, the past two as president-elect. He is the first black person to hold the top position.

A composer as well as teacher and performer, Carter also has received a grant from the National Endowment of the Arts to complete a major jazz ballet on which he has been working for several years. Entitled "The Whistle," the story line is that of Emmett Till, a black youth who was killed in Mississippi in 1955 for allegedly whistling at a white woman. This is Carter's first work in the ballet form.

Finally, the music man was appointed a member of the jazz panel of the National Endowment for the Arts, which is responsible for awarding grants in that field.

Carter established jazz activities at GSU 12 years ago. His ensembles and combos have achieved both national and international acclaim at jazz festivals and competitions in the U.S., Switzerland, and South America.

A national magazine, School Musicians, Director and Teacher, has named Carter one of the ten outstanding music educators of 1982.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION FOREIGN CURRENCY GRANTS PROGRAM

Opportunities for support of research in Burma, Guinea, India, and Pakistan in the following disciplines: Anthropology, archaeology and related disciplines; systematic and environmental biology, astrophysics and earth sciences, and museum programs. Awards to American institutions for the research of senior scientists; determined on the basis of competitive scholarly review.

Deadline: November 1 annually. For information write the Foreign Currency Grants Program, Office of Fellowships and Grants, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20560 or call (202) 287-3321.

Sympathies

To Janice Schluntz and family upon the death of her father, John, after a long illness, Friday, August 27.

Say Goodbye

To Marty Armstrong, UL, an eleven year Veteran of Innovation; to Joe Meredith, UL, just short of his eleven year mark of service, and to Ted Andrews, CAS, who would have observed his twelfth anniversary as a GSLuer on September 9. All three retired on August 31.

Marty plans to leave the area soon. Joe has hied himself off to his cabin in Indiana and Ted and his wife will call Arkansas their home (see Inscapes, August 27.)
