GSU String Quartet Opens Season
October 24

A new season, a new first violinist and a new guest artist will mark the October 24 concert of the GSU String Quartet at 3:30 pm in the University's Music Recital Hall. It is free to the public.

The first of three on-campus concerts during the 1982-83 season will feature works by Gabriel Faure, Franz Schubert, Donald Jenni and Franz Joseph Haydn.

Marilyn Bourgeois, CAS professor of piano will join with Elmer Rosen, violin, Robert Shamo, viola, and Alan Rostoker, cello, in Faure's "First Piano Quartet," Op. 15. Bourgeois is familiar to GSU concert goers as soloist and accompanist for various faculty members and the GSU-Community Chorale. She holds the BFA degree from Stephens College and the MM from Indiana University, where she studied with Jorge Bolet. She also studied piano with Jeanne-Marie Darre at Academia Internationale d'Ete in Nice, France.

The String Quartet's first violinist, Raya Kodesh-Beatty will debut in the final work on the program, "String Quartet in D minor" (Quinten), Op. 76, No. 2, by Haydn.

Russian born and trained Kodesh-Beatty earned her master's degree from Leningrad State Conservatory as concert performer, orchestra soloist and violin teacher. After ten years of concertizing and teaching in Russia, she emigrated to Israel in 1972. She served the next two years as principal second violinist with the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra and performed in solo and with chamber music ensembles.

Kodesh-Beatty came to the United States in 1974 and became principal second violinist with the Kansas City Philharmonic. Two years later, she joined the St. Louis Symphony, which she served for the next three years. Since coming to Chicago in 1979, she has played in the Grant Park Symphony and other musical organizations. She currently is assistant concertmistress of the Lyric Opera of Chicago Orchestra and is concertmistress of the Orchestra of Illinois.

The GSU String Quartet was founded late in 1979 as the first professional ensemble of its kind in the southern suburbs. Since then, it has appeared in concert on the campus at least three times each academic year and numerous times throughout the Chicago area. The highlight of each year is the President's Concert at GSU, a benefit performance which has raised thousands of dollars for the GSU Foundation's Community College Scholarship Fund.

The next on-campus concert of the Quartet is scheduled for Sunday, February 6, 1983.
Susan B. was looking for three books she needed for her graduate research project. After a few minutes searching the library card catalog, she found that the books were available and made a request to check them out.

This is not exactly an unusual activity for a college student. What made Susan’s book search unusual, however, was that it occurred at a computer terminal. Her requests were fed into an “electronic card catalog” that searched, not only the GSU collection, but the collections of 20 academic libraries throughout the state of Illinois. One book Susan wanted was in the stacks at GSU. Another was found to be at Chicago State, and the third was in the stacks at the University of Illinois at Urbana. The books from Chicago State and Urbana were delivered by a van to GSU and to Susan within 48 hours of her request.

Susan was using the Library Computer System (LCS). LCS is an on-line system for identifying and charging out materials from GSU’s Library and from the libraries of colleges and universities participating in the LCS network. Using LCS, a student at GSU has access to a much wider range of materials than are available at any one library. Over 7 million book titles have been computerized. A statewide delivery system routes vans and trucks among the cooperating institutions. If the author and/or title of an item is known, the LCS database can be searched to find out if GSU’s Library has it and where it is located in the collection. A display on the computer screen will tell if the item is already checked out and it can be held, if desired, so that it will be available to the searcher when it is returned. Browsing through the library’s shelves can be done by displaying the titles in a call number area. Searching for material can be done in other LCS libraries, too, and if a library user finds something to check out, the LCS system will be used to circulate that item. LCS also informs the student when something which has been checked out by him/her is overdue!

While LCS in its present phase of development does not fully replace the traditional card catalog, it is a big step in the direction of a comprehensive electronic catalog. Thanks to funds provided by the GSU Alumni Association, the University Library now has four LCS computer terminals available for public use. Anyone can use the system. It takes just a few minutes to learn. Instructional guides are located by the terminals and library staff members will be happy to provide assistance.

Seminar on Incest to Focus on Cause, Effect, Treatment

Dr. Judith Lewis Herman, assistant professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and author of the recently published award-winning book, "Father-Daughter Incest," will head a group of ten experts in presenting a two-day conference on "Incest: Parent-Child Sexual Contact," at GSU on Saturday and Sunday, October 23-24.

The conference will focus on the characteristics of incestuous families and issues in providing services to the victims and abusers. It is planned especially for psychiatrists, social workers, counselors, pediatricians, nurses, teachers, ministers, law enforcement personnel, attorneys and administrators of schools, agencies and hospitals.

Some researchers into this long-forbidden subject estimate that between 4 and 12% of American families engage in incestuous behavior. Clinicians are seeing greater numbers of victims of the practice.

"Research has shown that as many as one million American women have been involved in incestuous relations with their fathers, and about 16,000 new cases occur each year," says Dr. Barbara B. Jenkins, HLD professor of clinical psychology and general instructor for the course. "Newspapers, television and magazines recently have carried major series about incest and have helped to bring the subject out of the closet. But they sometimes have sensationalized it. It is important that some scholarly attention be given to this serious social problem."

The conference will open on October 23 at 9:00 am with a session on "Male Violence Against Women," by Dr. Pauline B. Bart, professor of sociology, University of Illinois School of Medicine. At 9:45 am, Dr. Herman will lead the first of her two sessions, discussing "The Characteristics of Incestuous Families; the Effect on the Victims; Myths." She will speak at 4:40 that afternoon on "Treatment of Adult Victims: Biases in Helpers." Her book, "Father-Daughter Incest," was given the C. Wright Mills Award as the best book for 1982 by the Society for the Study of Social Problems.

Other Saturday topics and their presenters are: "Forgetting Childhood Traumas in the Traditional Family," by Dr. Robert A. Jenkins, counselor with a private practice in Chicago Heights; and "Impact of Incest and Sexual Abuse in Preschool Children," by Terri Pease Schwartz, university professor of clinical psychology at GSU.

Topics for the Sunday sessions and their presenters are: "Investigation of a Case: Assessment, Intervention, Treatment, Working with the Police," by Pamala G. Klein, director of Rape and Sexual Abuse Center, Southern Illinois University; "Prosecution of Fathers Who Sexually Abuse Their Children," by Marcia Lohrmann Luecke, chief deputy prosecuting attorney for the 67th Judicial Circuit Court of Indiana, Valparaiso; "Treatment of Incestuous Fathers," by Erik B. Skamser, consultant with the Child Sexual Abuse Treatment and Training Center of Illinois, Inc., Bolingbrook; "Treatment of Parents Who Sexually Abuse," by Dr. Judith Ann Cooney, university professor of school counseling, GSU; and "Treatment of Adolescent Victims: A Developmental Approach," by Ellen M. Locke, of the Child Sexual Abuse Treatment and Training Center of Illinois, Inc.

Professor Jenkins will conduct the closing session at 5:45 pm on "Some Material on Incest for use in the Classroom." There will be several opportunities for small group discussions throughout the two days.

Conference participants can earn one hour of undergraduate or graduate credit. The conference also has been approved for 15 hours, category A, for Illinois Psychological Association Continuing Education Program. Fees are $55.00 for conference seeking college credit and $76.25 ($145.25 for nonresidents of Illinois) for graduates seeking credit.

For registration and other information, contact Donald Hansen, GSU Office of Special Programs, 2307 James Street, Forest Park, IL 60130. (312) 534-5000, extension 2121.

Marie Winn, noted author and expert on the effects of television on children, will lead off a Governors State University three-day symposium on "Children and Television" Saturday, October 23.

The session at the GSU campus begins at 9:30 am featuring Winn, author of "Children and Television" Saturday and Sunday, October 23-24.
