Buzzing Bees No Bother for Blobaum

Winter weather seemingly brings nature to a standstill. Paul Blobaum knows, however, that there is a beehive of activity outside his dining room window. Literally.

In the winter, Blobaum says, the tens of thousands of honeybees in his two hives mostly stay inside. But they are still involved in a very important enterprise.

“They cluster around the queen,” he says. “They lock their legs together and vibrate their wings at a specific frequency. That generates heat and keeps the hive warm.” The bees eat stored-away pollen and dip into the honey that surrounds them in the hive.

Blobaum, an Associate Professor of Library Science and former GSU Faculty Senate President, has been keeping honeybees at his Park Forest home for 10 years. Beekeeping is something of a family tradition; when his grandfather retired in the 1970s, he set up hives on the family’s central Illinois farm, and his father and uncle now keep bees.

Honeybees are very social animals, he says, with a highly organized way of doing things both inside and outside the hive. In the summer, they fly as far as eight miles away in search of nectar and pollen. Their honey-making activities require discipline, physical strength, and uncommon industry.

Blobaum enjoys his hobby and knowing his hives function so well. Last year the hives produced 200 pounds of honey – the most in all his years of keeping bees. That, he says, is a sign of healthy bees. Blobaum harvests raw honey each fall, sending most of it to his father and uncle for further processing.

As the winter days get longer, Blobaum’s honeybees show more interest in the world outside the hive. They start venturing outside as the sun climbs higher in the sky. In February, the queen starts laying eggs to replenish the supply of worker bees. The bees bide their time, waiting for warmer weather, and the first activity from pollen-producing plants.

Then, he says, “They are ready to begin making honey again.”

Arts Midwest and GSU Help Seniors Enjoy the Show

Thanks to a $3,500 grant awarded by the Arts Midwest Performing Arts Fund, more than 35 senior citizens enjoyed the performance of the opera Die Fledermaus on Sunday, January 17, in The Center for Performing Arts. The seniors were residents of The Park in Olympia Fields and the Jesse Jackson Senior Building in Harvey.

Prior to the performance, they joined others at a pre-performance workshop facilitated by Philip Seward of the Lyric Opera Company. Mr. Seward discussed the plot, music, and intricacies of the opera to enhance the enjoyment of the performance.

The Arts Midwest Performing Arts Fund supports the inter-state touring of professional performing artists specializing in the fine arts of dance, theater, music, youth and family entertainment, and other meaningful performing art forms appropriate for communities throughout Arts Midwest's nine-state region. These engagements include public performances and in-depth educational activities reaching audiences that lack access to the performing arts.

Leading the Way

Dr. Lucianne Brown, a Chicago area pioneer in the use of computers in the classroom, recently took her expertise in educational technology overseas. Dr. Brown presented her paper, Using Mobile Learning to Teach Reading, at last October’s Handheld Learning 2009 conference in London, England. The annual conference on learning, teaching and mobile computing attracted thousands of participants from all around the world.

According to Dr. Brown, a lecturer in the College of Education, the conference marked the first time she presented her entire paper, written as a doctoral dissertation. The paper is based on research on cell phone learning that she conducted with a group of students at Lincoln-Way Central High School. Dr. Brown gave the students cell phones loaded with vocabulary words to determine if they would benefit from “electronic flash cards.” Another group of students worked on vocabulary lists without the cell phones. Her research indicated that the students with cell phones learned the vocabulary words and showed high motivation levels.

At the London conference, Dr. Brown was one of six presenters of long papers in the research strand, and the only research presenter from the United States. She said her paper was well-received and that she came back from the conference with “lots of new ideas” on how to use new technology in training teachers.

At GSU, Dr. Brown teachers her students in Internet use – specifically digital offerings through the Library of Congress – and how to conduct online primary source research.

Educators in other countries are making substantial progress in furthering teaching applications for cell phones and other handheld devices, she said. “In India and South Africa, there is much more going on (with handheld devices) than in the United States. In those countries, children as young as kindergarten age are learning with the help of cell phones.”

Access Limited

The driveway leading to the F Wing dock will be closed Monday, January 25 through Friday January 29. The kitchen dock will remain accessible.

DPS Recognized for Generous Efforts

GSU’s Department of Public Safety has been recognized for its fundraising efforts on behalf of the Illinois Special Olympics Torch Run Committee. Chief Debra Boyd accepted a bronze plaque from the committee at this month’s Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police Winter Conference in Tinley Park.

In 2009, the DPS raised $8,393 for the Special Olympics Torch Run. Officer Crystal Richards coordinated fundraising, distribution of items, and the university-wide picnic after the run. Numerous members of the department volunteered their time to raise funds, work at the barbecue, solicit donations for the picnic, and serve after the run. Several people outside the DPS also assisted in fundraising efforts. The department is grateful for everyone’s help and contribution.

Officer Johnny McDowell has been the department’s leading fundraiser for several years. Last year, he singlehandedly raised more than $4,000 through the sale of hats, t-shirts, and pins. That exceeded his previous yearly fundraising amount by about $500.

Community Campaign a BIG Success (01-21-10)

The success of the 2009 Campus Community Campaign was celebrated last week in the cafeteria with popcorn, prizes, and lots of well-deserved thanks to both contributors and CCC volunteers. The grand total raised through the generosity of the GSU community in the 2009 Campus Community Campaign was $72,511. Fifty percent of the campus community contributed.

Much of the credit for the success of the CCC goes to the hard work of the Campus Community Campaign volunteers. They include: Sonja Anderson, Gail Bradshaw, Keith Briggs, Lisa Carra, Kyusuk Chung, Judy Ferneau, Kevin Graves, Viola Gray, Sheryl Jones-Harper, Nicole Harrison, Mary Hession, Carolyn Machura, Nancy Miller, Margaret Neumann, Kevin O'Shea, Tracey Paynes, Sheree Sanderson, Scott Smith, Danella Soeka, and Karol Woodward. Each volunteer was recognized with a framed certificate.

Semester Explanation Resources Available

Beginning in Fall 2010, GSU will operate on a new semester-based academic calendar. Members of the surrounding community may be interested in additional information about how the new academic calendar will affect their partnerships with GSU.

- Off campus partners, such as internship sites and practicum supervisors, may need information about and explanation of possible adjustments to their work with GSU students.
- Understanding the new GSU academic calendar may also impact the ways that community college faculty and staff advise their students who are planning to transfer to GSU.
- Community members who participate in programs and events presented or hosted by GSU may also be interested in understanding the new calendar.

It is critical for GSU personnel to work with their off-site partners, community college colleagues, and other community members toward understanding the characteristics and impact of the new semester-based calendar. To assist GSU personnel, templates of letters explaining the semester calendar are available on the new semester website. These letters may be adapted to meet the requirements of specific programs, partnerships, and purposes.
To view the letter templates or for more information about the new semester calendar, visit www.govst.edu/semesters. This website also includes a FAQ with answers to questions about the change and the academic calendars for the next three years. Specific questions about the change can also be submitted via this site.

Docents Learn and Lead

Volunteer docents at the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park help visitors to the park understand its 26 pieces of art, and the meaning and motivations behind the art and the artist. Training for the 2010 class of docents begins February 4. Volunteers interested in learning about art and sharing their knowledge are encouraged to join.

“Docents lead tours, host programs and receptions, and act as ambassadors of the park,” explained Geoff Bates, director and curator of the park. “This is a great way to get involved, to learn about contemporary sculpture, and meet lots of interesting people.”
Docent orientation consists of seven evening sessions spread over a 12-week period and a morning tour of the sculpture park. Session topics include park history, an introduction to the history of sculpture, presentations on each piece in the collection, and pointers on how to conduct tours of the sculpture park.

Docent training sessions are conducted on Thursdays, beginning February 4 and continuing through April 15, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The final session is a tour of the park on Saturday, April 17, from 8:30 a.m. to noon. DFI Graduate Student Scholarships

The Diversifying Higher Education Faculty in Illinois (DFI) Program Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) recently announced the release of the 2010-2011 application for the DFI Fellowship Program. The DFI program provides competitive need-based financial awards to underrepresented students in graduate degree programs in participating Illinois higher education institutions. Program funding for the 2010-2011 academic year (FY2011) is contingent on the availability of funds appropriated by the Governor and Illinois General Assembly.

Completed application materials must be submitted to Dean Sherilyn Poole in C1330 on or before February 19, at 5 p.m. For more information and application forms, visit www.ibhe.org/DFI/application.htm.
Social Work Students Research Community Preparedness

GSU Social Work students were recognized recently for their participation in The Maturing of Illinois, a community preparedness report assessing local readiness for the aging of the baby boomer generation. Thirteen communities throughout Illinois were surveyed in the report.

Students conducted the research as part of Dr. Lorri Glass’s Social Work 530–Urban Dynamics class in Winter 2009. Dr. Glass, Assistant Professor of Social Work, and her 27 students collected data for AgeOptions, the suburban Cook County agency on aging. The report was prepared in partnership with Bloom Township and Chicago Heights, where students polled older adults to determine whether the city is currently meeting their needs and whether it is on track to provide future services to a growing senior population.

“Dr. Glass and her students went above and beyond the initial assessment questions to evaluate how community characteristics could impact the quality of life of older residents,” said Rebecca Burgstahler, Planning Specialist with AgeOptions. “Their feedback and observations demonstrated an understanding of the changing needs of residents as they age.”

Dr. Glass attended AgeOptions’ annual volunteer recognition luncheon in November, where agency officials noted her students’ contributions. Dr. Glass’s students conducted the ethnographic research and observation portion of the study, which was more qualitative in nature. Students also broke up into teams to observe and analyze programs and services, including transportation, public safety, shopping, parks and recreation, and a host of other factors related to quality-of-life issues for older adults.

In Winter 2010, students in Dr. Glass’s Social Work 320 class will conduct census work for AgeOptions and the Urban Dynamics class will do a community needs assessment of GSU’s Family Development Center.

Time-Saving Strategies: Organizing Online Content

Learn how to better use Blackboard CE-8 during an important, timesaving workshop. Instead of making additional copies of the course syllabus, lecture notes, PowerPoint presentations, and other content materials, educators can make them available to students online... through Blackboard CE-8.

The Center for Online Teaching and Learning is offering Time-Saving Strategies to Organize Online Content. This hands-on workshop will discuss best formats to save, publish, and organize materials online for students.

The workshop will be held on Thursday, January 21, from 10 to 11:30 a.m., in D2438 in the ACS lab. To register for this workshop, contact Barb Mandel.

Toward a Healthy (01-14-10)

Let’s Get Fit is back for another year of improving lives through exercise. Persons who didn’t take part in last year’s health and exercise program can sign up for Let’s Get Fit at the Human Resources office. If you participated last year, pick up your fitness record card before you start exercising.

During the program, members exercise three times per week for a minimum of 30 minutes, or a total of nine times during January. Participants can qualify for prizes by having fitness record cards validated following exercise sessions.

Participants can choose from a number of exercise options, including walking through the university halls or, weather permitting, the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park; using the fitness machines and equipment or taking an exercise class at the GSU Recreation and Fitness Center; attending a Let’s Get Fit educational outreach session; or joining Weight Watchers and attending meetings. These all count as health/exercise sessions.

In addition, participants can go to the doctor for an annual check-up and get a receipt for validation. It is important to set health goals and follow a proper diet. A visit to the doctor counts as a health session and will be validated on the fitness record card.

For more information, contact Human Resources at ext. 4100.

Be Involved

Come one, come all to the Student Involvement Fair on Wednesday, January 20, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., in the Hall of Governors. Learn about the many clubs and organizations working to learn more, contribute more, and have more fun at GSU.

Clubs and organizations wishing to have representation at the fair are asked to register by contacting Chay Wilson at ext. 7653. This event is sponsored by Student Life.

Call for Commencement Volunteers

Once again, GSU staff, faculty, and students are asked to help make commencement a very special time for all of everyone by volunteering. The 2010 Winter Commencement will be held on Saturday, February 6, at 11 a.m., at the Tinley Park Holiday Inn Select and Convention Center.
Volunteers are needed to answer questions, provide directions, assist with robing faculty and students, and assist with guest entry and seating. Volunteers play an important role in making commencement a most memorable experience for our students, faculty, staff and guests.

For more information or to volunteer, please contact Pulchratia Kinney-Smith at ext. 7466 by Wednesday January 27.

Harris Bank Supports the NMSP

The value of contributions to the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park can be seen every time visitors to the park look across the pond and see Horizons, the 12-figure sculpture by Steinunn Thórarinsdóttir. The sculpture, which will be on display until October, was made possible in part by a generous donation by Harris Bank.

Harris Bank also sponsored the recent NMSP recognition dinner featuring a presentation by Thórarinsdóttir. More than 100 guests attended the event in which the contributions of Lewis Manilow, Dr. Stuart Fagan, Dr. Ora Fagan, and Dr. William H. Dodd, vice president of development at GSU, were acknowledged.

The distance we have traveled in the past 30 years is significant and it was important to recognize the actions and the people who have brought us to where we currently stand,” said park director and curator Geoffrey Bates. “Contributions by so many individuals and by corporations like Harris Bank have made this progress possible.”

Celebrating Literacy

Readers are needed for the 21st annual African American Read-In, which will take place at GSU on February 13, from 6 to 8 p.m., in Sherman Recital Hall. The Read-In, a national event, celebrates literacy as a significant part of Black History Month. Across the country, more than a million readers from all ethnic backgrounds will take part in the event.

Participants should select an excerpt of a book, poem, or other literary work written by an African American author, and read the excerpt at the Read-In.

To sign up for the Read-In or receive further information, contact Dr. Rashidah Muhammad at ext. 6974.

Professors Offer Services in Thailand

Half a world away, Thailand is ancient and exotic, its culture steeped in Buddhism and unbroken by Western influences. According to Dr. Jon Carlson, University Professor of Psychology and Counseling, our modern world increasingly poses challenges to traditional social systems rooted in family or tribal relationships.

Dr. Carlson will soon return from a visit to Thailand, where he again offered his skills as a mental health practitioner. It is the 10th straight year he has travelled to the Southeast Asia nation to meet with people needing care and local health care workers seeking ways to help them.

On this year’s trip, Dr. Cyrus Ellis, Associate Professor of Counseling, accompanied Dr. Carlson. Their planned itinerary took them to the remote Golden Triangle area in the north of Thailand, the source of much of the world’s opium, as well as Thammasat University in Bangkok.

“I always leave with a set itinerary,” Dr. Carlson said. “But it always changes. The basic plan is to meet with teachers and medical professionals, and to offer assistance to people looking for behavioral change.”

As a psychologist specializing in Adlerian therapy, Dr. Carlson espouses an approach based on understanding an individual’s characteristic lifestyle choices prior to their taking steps that lead to change. He believes Adlerian principles fit in very well with the traditions of Thai society.

Thailand is a poor country and has few services promoting mental health. Many persons seeking advice turn to nurses or pharmacists with no mental health training. Drug addiction is widespread and often untreated.

Dr. Carlson said he sees many persons looking for relatively short-term strategies on how to lead more fulfilling lives. “People are really moved by this type of therapy,” he said. “I met one woman who lost everything in a mudslide. She lost her family, too, and was living in the streets, collecting cans to make money. I treated her as someone who was filled with energy. When she left, she had a different outlook, and was determined to become a local entrepreneur. You could see that she walked out differently. She was ready to face the world.”

Prepare for Battle

GSU’s Penny Wars are about to begin. Prepare to have some fun and raise money for the Civil Service Scholarship Fund and Student Life.

From February 1 to 26, the Penny Wars competition will pit department against department. Each participating department establishes its own sealed container, such as a plastic gallon milk jug. Each container must be labeled with the name of the department. Containers should be placed in a central location, accessible to everyone, but also supervised for security.

Employees, students, and visitors may feed the bank with pennies to support the cause and the department. One point is earned for every penny gathered by the department. However, competing departments can sabotage the bank by adding nickels, dimes, quarters, and folding money to the container. Each silver coin or bill reduces the number of points in that container by the amount of the coin or bill.
Containers will be emptied and points tallied every Thursday. Totals will be posted in the Monday edition of the GSU View. The department with the most points for that week will display a rotating jumbo Lincoln penny. At the end of the competition, the department with the greatest number of points will be awarded the jumbo penny to display for the next year.

Contact Lisa Carra at ext. 7443 by January 25 with your department name and a contact person’s name and phone number.

Pre-Kindergarten On Campus

The Family Development Center (FDC) is now accepting enrollment in the three-day-a-week, half-day pre-kindergarten program, as well as the five-day-a-week, either full or half day, pre-kindergarten program. Both programs serve the educational needs of three, four, and five year olds. Drop in care is also available for pre-registered children.

Tuition adjustments based on eligibility are available. For more information, visit the FDC website or call ext. 7300.

Faculty Seminar – Nontraditional Students in Math

Many of GSU students are considered nontraditional based on their age, education background, family background, and part time status. Dr. Dianna Galante of the College of Arts and Sciences will present a faculty seminar on A Profile of the Nontraditional Student Majoring in Mathematics on Tuesday, January 19, at 3 p.m., in E1582.

Substitute Teacher Preparation

GSU is hosting a one-day Substitute Teacher Academy with Resources workshop on February 20, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Hall of Honors. The workshop teaches new subs what to expect, what to do in an emergency, how to maintain classroom control, and how to follow the teacher’s lesson plans.

The State of Illinois offers substitute teacher certification to those with a bachelor’s degree in any subject. Instruction on how to apply for the certificate is also included in the presentation.

While no special skills are required to get a substitute teacher certificate, many school districts encourage their subs, whether certified teachers or not, to take special substitute teacher workshops, such as this one, to familiarize themselves with the process and pitfalls of subbing.

Participants most hold a bachelor’s degree and register by February 15. Registration is limited to 40 participants. The $50 registration fee includes lunch and materials.

For more information and to register, call 708.534.4024.
Announcing Semester Calendar (01-11-10)

Beginning in Fall 2010, GSU will adopt a semester-based academic calendar. The semester-based calendar coincides with the academic schedules of most universities throughout the country. This updated schedule will ease student transition from community colleges to GSU, better serve returning students with families and employment, and make GSU summer courses more accessible to students from other institutions.

For the past 40 years, GSU has operated under a trimester-based academic calendar. “The trimester system that has served GSU through its first decades will now give way to a more flexible calendar that will address the needs of our current and future students through the decades to come,” said Dr. Elaine P. Maimon, President of GSU.

The new academic calendar offers 15-week Fall and Spring semesters and an 11-week Summer session. The Fall 2010 semester begins August 30 and ends December 12, 2010. The Spring 2011 semester begins January 18 and ends May 8, 2011. The Spring semester will also include a week long spring break, which is new to GSU. The Summer 2011 session begins May 23 and ends August 7, 2011.

Applications are accepted and processed for each new semester up to the conclusion of the open registration periods. Registration dates have been modified to fit the revised academic calendar and best serve students’ needs.

For more information about the new semester calendar, visit www.govst.edu/semesters. This website includes resources for communicating information about the change to community partners such as site supervisors and community college program advisors. It also includes a FAQ with answers to questions about the change and the academic calendars for the next three years. Specific questions about the change can also be submitted via this site.

Math and Sculpture Become One

What can Paul Bunyan’s giant foot teach us about mathematics? And how can teachers use GSU’s Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park to show the relationship between numbers and art?

Dr. Dianna Galante, Associate Professor of Mathematics, believes the sculpture park is filled with practical lessons about numerous mathematical concepts. During the fall trimester, she assigned students in two Math Methods courses to devise lessons involving sculptures on GSU’s campus. Dr. Galante’s classes are required for students seeking to become certified math teachers in grades six through 12.

“Every time I drive to work, I look at the sculptures,” said Galante. “One day, I thought, ’Aren’t they beautiful? And look at all the math that’s here.’”

As a result, Galante assigned her students to come up with one-page worksheet lessons based on a piece of art in the sculpture park. The lessons were meant to be incorporated into field trips to the sculpture park.

Paul, GSU’s depiction of the larger-than-life folk hero Paul Bunyan, can be used to demonstrate ratios and proportions. One proposed lesson asks young mathematicians to measure the lumberjack’s foot, compare it to their own, and calculate the height of the statue through the use of a simple equation.

Another student proposed measuring the triangles in Art Ark, located in the Hall of Governors. Yet another suggested that students make drawings, envisioned from above, of the multiple planes and angles of Illinois Landscape No. 5. The spirals of Passage, located in GSU’s interior courtyard, can teach a lesson about Fibonacci sequences found in Nautilus shells and other natural phenomenon.

“I was very pleased with the students’ response to this assignment,” Galante said. “They developed ways to teach mathematical concepts. They also showed how middle and high school students visiting the sculpture park can connect with art, which is a valuable experience.”

To present their lessons to the class, students used curriculum enhancing technologies provided by a grant awarded to the GSU Foundation by ComEd in support of the Mathematic Teacher Education program at the university.

Glass Ceiling Broken

The CBPA’s own Dean Ellen Foster Curtis was recently mentioned in the Chicago Tribune. Foster Curtis attended a luncheon at Roosevelt University with female leaders from other area universities. They discussed their success and the challenges they faced on the way.

Docents Lead the Way

Volunteer docents at the Nathan Manilow Sculpture Park help park visitors to the park understand its 26 pieces of art, and the meaning and motivations behind the art and the artist. Training for the 2010 docent class of docents begins February 4. Volunteers interested in learning about art and sharing their knowledge are encouraged to join.

“Docents lead tours, host programs and receptions, and act as ambassadors of the park,” explains Geoff Bates, Director and curator of the park. “This is a great way to get involved, to learn about contemporary sculpture, and meet interesting people.”

Docent orientation consists of seven evening sessions spread over a 12-week period and a morning tour of the sculpture park. Session topics include park history, an introduction to the history of sculpture, presentations on each piece in the collection, and pointers on how to conduct tours of the sculpture park.

Docent training sessions are conducted on Thursdays, beginning February 4 and continuing through April 15, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The final session is a tour of the park on Saturday, April 17, from 8:30 a.m. to noon. Light refreshments and materials are provided. Advance registration and a $30 fee are required.

For more information on the park docent program and other volunteer opportunities, call ext. 4486, email the park, or visit the website.

Dr. Terry Allison Named as Provost (01-07-10)

On Wednesday, January 6, President Maimon announced that Dr. Terry L. Allison has been named as the next Provost of Governors State University. Dr. Allison will join the GSU staff in early July. Dr. Maimon noted, “As a result of an exemplary search, we have attracted a first rate academic leader to join us. I look forward to a smooth transition and to working with Terry for many years to come.”

With nineteen years experience and multiple leadership roles at two California State University campuses, Dr. Allison is exceptionally qualified for the Provost's position at GSU. Upon his appointment, Dr. Allison said, “I am so pleased that the Provost Search Committee as well as President Maimon and her management team have placed confidence in me to serve as Provost during the next phase of GSU's growth. I look forward to working with the GSU university community to expand access to high quality education in the region the campus serves. If you watched the Tournament of Roses Parade on New Year's Day, you know I’ll miss California weather. But having lived in New York City and the Los Angeles area, I look forward to enjoying all that America’s Second City and the surrounding area have to offer.”

Allison is currently Dean of the College of Arts and Letters at California State University, Los Angeles, and previously served as a faculty member and administrator at California State University, San Marcos. At both universities, he has consistently demonstrated a commitment to academically rigorous, innovative programs to serve first-generation college students. Dr. Allison brings a transparent and collegial leadership style to GSU, as well as innovative thinking and a history of creative strategic planning and program building in a wide variety of subject areas to serve working and underserved students.

Dr. David Curtis, who will continue to serve as GSU's Interim Provost until Dr. Allison’s arrival said, “I am confident in our selection of Dr. Allison. His breadth of experience, especially with underserved populations, will allow him to help the university successfully achieve the goals set forth in Strategy 2015. I look forward to working with him closely during his transition to GSU.”

A Ph.D. in Literature from the University of California, San Diego, Dr. Allison is an active author, editor, and grant writer. He is particularly proud of the Quinceanera Project, which motivates fifteen-year-old Latina students to complete high school and attend California State University, San Marcos. He wrote a successful US Department of Education Title IIIA grant proposal to start health and human services programs at Cal State San Marcos. At Cal State LA he worked to

The Provost Search Committee, chaired by Dr. Curtis and assisted by Dr. Jamie Ferrare of Academic Search, Inc., reviewed 78 applications, exercised excellent judgment in selecting semi-finalists, and took the lead in organizing campus visits for the two finalists. According to search committee member Dr. Chip Coldren, "Dr. Allison brings breadth and depth of experience to Governors State University. I expect he will hit the ground running and make positive contributions to the future development of our university. I have trust and confidence in him."

Who’s Who in Delta Mu

Thirty-eight business students were installed recently as the inaugural class of GSU’s newly-organized chapter of Delta Mu Delta, an international honor society that recognizes scholastic achievement in business.

Elizabeth Rene Green is president of Lambda Delta chapter. Other officers are Kelly N. Legner, vice president; Ashleigh Nicole Hostert, secretary; and Felisha Chivon Parker, treasurer.

Dr. Ellen Foster Curtis, Dean of the College of Business and Public Administration, gave the welcoming address at the ceremony. Honorary inductees included Mary Fote, of Bimba Manufacturing Company; Joseph Christofanelli, of Ernst &Young LLP; Dr. Leon Finney Jr., of Metropolitan Apostolic Community Church; and Dr. T.J. Knowing Your Database

Twenty-first century accounting professionals are increasingly asked to participate in the design and development of their company's information systems. They often must create, maintain, and query their company's electronic database.

Dr. T.J. Wang teaches his accounting students to know the principles of database normalization, the process of efficiently organizing information in a computer storage...
For nearly 10 years, he has told his students they need to be familiar with database normalization. Dr. Wang's paper explaining why this practice is essential, Accounting for the Benefits of Database Normalization, appears in the January 2010 issue of the American Journal of Business Education. He is lead writer for the paper, co-authored by Dr. Hui Du and Dr. Conni Lehman, both of the University of Houston, Clear Lake.

The paper is based on an experiment that Dr. Wang conducted with GSU accounting students two years ago. First, students completed an exam on database normalization principles, including several “forms” that serve as rules for the construction of computer storage areas. Following the exam, they learned about the normalization forms, which dictate the creation of databases that effectively and efficiently store information.

Traditionally, Dr Wang said, database normalization has been more within the realm of Management Information Systems. Accounting students learn Accounting Information Systems (AIS) but the storage of information on databases is not always part of their curriculum. AIS textbooks offer differing takes on normalization, he said, and some completely ignore the subject.

Dr. Wang believes students learning AIS need to receive consistent information on normalization and that this knowledge will give them greater confidence in their skills as accountants. Students need to know the nature of the database, including the size of its storage capacity. In striving for reconciliation – that stage of the accounting process when all the figures add up – students need to know that the numbers on the database are not redundant and how, if necessary, to locate them on the database.

Holiday Gratitude

The Department of Student Life would like to thank the many generous contributors to the December food drive. With the university community’s help, more than 90 families received food for the holidays.

Special thanks go to the departments of Admissions and Alumni Relations for their extensive donations, to GSU student Justine Putnam, who contributed more than $700 in food, and to the Student Senate for its donation of $2,500.

The Department of Student Life appreciates the kindness and generosity of everyone involved.
