GSU MEETS G-M II...Terming himself "the new kid on the block," President Leo-Goodman-Malamuth officially took office September 1 at the First Fall Faculty Meeting and Luncheon. After an introduction of new staff members by Ted Andrews, Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dr. Goodman-Malamuth spoke to a packed audience in Engbretson Hall, greeting the staff and commenting on his hopes for education at GSU. Presentations by various staff members and a luncheon held in the Hall of Governors followed. To close the meeting, the President discussed "The Future of GSU," noting that it would be "presumptuous to give a big talk" on the University's future at this point. He indicated that he would deal instead with some possible areas of concern. Using "reassessment" as the key word, Dr. Goodman-Malamuth listed four areas to be considered by the University community under a definite timeline: 1) administration of the University--does it serve the educational needs of students? 2) governance--a new constitution for the University Assembly; 3) systematic program review; 4) closer programmatic articulation and personal relationships with community colleges.
