MAJOR STUDY ON INDOCHINESE REFUGEES AVAILABLE . . . A comprehensive assessment of the resettlement and adjustment patterns of Illinois' Indochinese refugee population is now available, following a two-year-long research project conducted by Young Kim, HLD University Professor. The five-volume report evaluates the adequacy of existing social and educational services which are currently being rendered to the refugees. The report consists of:

- (Volume I) Survey of Indochinese Refugees: Introduction, Summary and Recommendations;
- (Volume II) Survey of Indochinese Refugees: Methods and Procedures;
- (Volume III) Population Characteristics and Service Needs of Indochinese Refugees;
- (Volume IV) Psychological, Social, and Cultural Adjustment of Indochinese Refugees; and
- (Volume V) Survey of Agencies and Organizations Serving Indochinese Refugees.

The massive report is the culmination of a two-year effort by Kim with cooperation and support from Governors State University, the community and the government. The $110,870 funding for the project came from the Illinois Department of Public Aid (IDPA), channeled through the Travelers Aid Society of Metropolitan Chicago. Kim was selected to conduct the first, and so far only, comprehensive study in Illinois. The collected data will be used in policymaking and program planning by the 34 state and local service agencies throughout Illinois. As of May, 1979, there were an estimated 11,000 Indochinese refugees in approximately 4,000 households in the state. Seventy percent of the refugees are Vietnamese; the remaining thirty percent are Cambodians and Lao H'mongs. Kim reported that because their biggest problem is the language and cultural barrier, their progress is quite different from that of European immigrants. Kim, who has conducted research in areas of immigrant adjustment in a variety of ethnic groups during the past four years, expects to follow up this report next year. A copy is available in the University Library or from the IDPA/Refugee Resettlement Office, (312) 793-3150.
