And now...direct from Washington...

GSU's satellite receiving station has brought a lot of exciting new learning opportunities to residents of the south suburbs since its installation a few years ago. And it will happen again on Feb. 1 when the university kicks off "Black History Month" with a two-day conference on the topic of "Beyond the Dream, A Celebration of Black History."

The university's satellite capabilities will be used for a two-hour Washington-based discussion segment on the opening day of the workshop.

The two-day seminar will focus on the experiences and goals of Black Americans in education, politics, business and economics, social services, the military, the arts, entertainment, and sports. It runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 1 and on Feb. 18.

The satellite segment will begin at noon on the opening day and will feature discussions by politicians, businessmen, sports stars, and educational and military leaders.

Conference participants will be able to join in the discussions and interact with the panelists through a telephone hook-up.

"Student of the Year 2000" is topic for video programs

How will colleges and universities meet the challenges of the student in the year 2000?

The Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities -- governing board for GSU and Chicago State, Eastern Illinois, Northeastern Illinois, and Western Illinois universities -- considered those challenges during a recent series of discussions with experts, faculty and administrative staff.

Several of the discussions now have been released as 30-minute television productions and will be aired over cable stations in Crete, Flossmoor, Hazel Crest, Lansing, Matteson, Orland Park, Park Forest, Richton Park, Thornton and

Job title doesn't tell real story about UL chair

By Marilyn Thomas

Elizabeth Ann Glascoff, University Library division chair for technical services.

The title would have some believing this lady is pretentious, but that's the farthest thing from the truth.

Ann Glascoff is neither boastful nor brash, ambitious nor demeaning.

Ann Glascoff is a hard worker who likes her job and the people she works with. She's a delight to talk with and cares about the public she deals with and the materials they need.

"As far as my job title," she says, "I consider myself more of a middle-man. Harvey Varnet, director of the library, is my boss, and the directives he gives -- or we work out -- I have to put into place in my area of technical services working with 16 staff members."

The area of technical services includes documents, serials, acquisitions and catalog. Included in this is federal and state documents, which Ann has been in charge of since 1976.

She has a hard time putting her finger on the number of documents GSU receives, but she knows they include all copies of the Congressional Record and lots of materials from the Census Bureau, the Departments of Labor and Education and a host of other federal agencies. Then there are all the materials GSU receives from Illinois government agencies — from the governor's office on down.

Ann's work, with staff members Jean Brubaker and Maureen Bendoraitis, in compiling and maintaining these documents has won GSU ratings of "excellent" from the inspector of the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Now Ann's trying to catalog these government reports and documents for inclusion into the "main stream" of library materials so the student body and general public will be better able to use them. As it is, someone looking for government information has to know a few facts and dates before a search can be undertaken. Ann hopes changes will make looking for government information simpler.

Although her full name is Elizabeth Ann, she's been called Ann for years. "That's because my mother's name was Elizabeth and several cousins had nicknames that were Elizabeth derivatives, so I've been Ann," she said.

A native of Madison, Wisconsin she earned her undergraduate degree in history at the University of Wisconsin, Madison and went on for a master's degree in library science.

She married in college and when her husband, Walter, was called up for his military service, they went to Montgomery, Ala., where he worked on textbooks for Air University, an Air Force facility. Ann worked in the library there.

After the service, her husband got a job at the University of Chicago Library "and we followed the train line south until we found housing we could afford." Initially they lived in the Park Forest co-ops until they saved enough money for their home in Flossmoor.

The library was already established when Ann joined the GSU staff in 1973. She accepted a position as serials cataloger keeping the records for all the magazines, journals and other periodicals.

"When I came to GSU, my son was a toddler, and I saw it as a job," she remembers, "but about two years into it, I realized this was my career and I didn't mind the thought at all."

The Grapevine

Art professor will explain use of chairs for subject

Do you have a favorite comfy chair?

Professor Mary Bookwalter will tell us why she's selected chairs as her artist's subject during the first presentation in the 1989 Colloquia Series. Her talk "Chairs & Landscapes: Recent Prints and Drawings" will be given from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Jan. 31 in Engbretson Hall.

Besides chairs, Mary has also done a series of landscapes.

"The chairs are pastel drawings and the landscapes are color reduction woodcut and silkscreen monoprints," she explained. "Although the visual subject matter is very different, the theme of space and time is what each piece is about.

"My work has long been influenced by the pervading sameness of the Midwestern landscape," she notes. "I find the repetitious elements solid in their redundancy and comforting in their expected sameness. These prints address intervals of the ongoing experience of space and time.

"In the same manner the chairs, too, are intervals in time," she said. "They each have a story, but mostly I like the way a chair fills a space, sitting there and physically weaving itself into a space."

For those of you who can't make the Colloquia, you can see several of Mary's "chairs" on exhibit in the Infinity Gallery through Jan. 31.

Mary was a finalist in the Alice and Arthur Boer Art Competition at the Beverly Art Center in Chicago in 1988 for her work "Sisterchair."

Third World Conference Foundation sets program

Beverly Manley, former first lady of Jamaica, will speak on "Jamaica: A Current Assessment," when the host committee for the Third World Forum series sponsors a fundraising benefit reception and program on Jan. 26.

The event will be held in the Kenwood Room of the Hyde Park Hilton Conference Center, 4900 S. Lakeshore Drive in Chicago.

A $10 donation covers admission to a 6:30 p.m. reception and the 7:30 p.m. Manley address and discussion.

Funds raised from the event will be used to defray costs for the 15th Anniversary Third World Conference to be held at the Palmer House in Chicago on April 5 to 8. The conference theme will be "A 15-Year Retrospective of Social Movements and Social Change in Third World and Diaspora Communities: Projections for the Future."

Dr. Roger K. Oden, chairperson for the Division of Humanities and Social Sciences in the College of Arts and Sciences, is a co-chair for the host committee.

Phi Delta Kappa schedules two faculty lectures

It's been said that the way you walk says just as much about you as the way you talk.

Dr. Heather Harder of the College of Education will discuss this "Nonverbal Communication" at the Phi Delta Kappa education fraternity's Jan. 25 meeting beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Hall of Honors.

"Your display of enthusiasm, positive behavior and communication of high expectations can be both verbal and non-verbal, but most agree that the non-verbal communication speaks much louder than words," Dr. Harder explained.

Dr. George Garrett, also of the College of Education faculty, will speak on "Creating a Positive Atmosphere for Communication" when he addresses the Feb. 26 meeting of the group.

Dr. Garrett soon will be presenting a two-day workshop on the same topic for the Illinois School Administrators Academy.

Both programs will be preceded by a 7 p.m. social hour.

Ann has kept active in the profession. A member of the GSU administration with faculty tenure, Ann pursued her Certificate of Advanced Study in Library Science from the University of Chicago, and she's kept abreast of the various changes in library policies and services through the Suburban Library System and her work as secretary of the Illinet Federal Deposit Library Coordinating Council and as secretary of the Illinois Library Computer Systems Operations Committee.

Ann enjoys cooking and included several of her favorite recipes in the GSU University Chefs cookbook.

"Student of Year 2000" topic for new GSU cable series

University Park during the coming weeks.

The programs will be broadcast in weekend time slots normally scheduled for GSU Views, a talk-show featuring Dr. Leo Goodman-Malamuth, university president, as host. Each show will be followed by a regular GSU Views program and in some cases the Views guest will be discussing topics related to the "Student of the Year 2000" show.

Topics and their dates for airing are

- The weekend of Jan. 27: "Faculty" focusing on shortages, recruitment and demographic changes among current faculty; the Views features GSU Professor Jay Boersma discussing his photography work.

- The weekend of Feb. 3: "Impact and Implications of New Technology in Instructional Delivery" outlining the upcoming changes in providing information through satellites, phone relays and computer initiated developments; the Views features GSU's Dr. Mel Muchnik, special assistant to the president for new technologies, discussing the uses of cable and satellite technology.

- The weekend of Feb. 10: "Are Colleges Succeeding?" features an outline of what students are learning and how effectively the subjects are presented; the Views features BOG Chancellor Thomas Layzell giving an overview of higher education in Illinois from the 1960s to the 1980s.

- The weekend of Feb. 18: "Student Recruitment" outlining strategies for recruitment and retention of students; the Views features Richard Pride, GSU director of admissions and student recruitment, who compares today's college students to those of 30 years ago and discusses what these new students are looking for in a college.

- The weekend of Feb. 24: "How Will We Meet the Needs of Students in the Year 2000?" which considers older, returning students and how their needs can be served; the Views features Dr. Otis Lawrence, director of the Board of Governors Degree Program at GSU, explaining how persons can earn "lif experience" credit toward a bachelor degree.

- The weekend of March 3: "General Education" focuses on the quandry of a general curriculum versus a specialty curriculum; the Views features Sally Petrilli, coordinator of instructional development for the Instructional Communications Center at GSU, discussing telecourse production and curriculum.
