

presents
MONTANA REPERTORY THEATRE in
To Kill a Mockingbird

On Saturday, May 9, 2009, The Center for Performing Arts at Governors State University will present the nationally acclaimed Montana Repertory Theatre in its adaptation of To Kill a Mockingbird. The play, based on Harper Lee's 1960 Pulitzer Prize winning novel, highlights the injustice of race relations and provides audiences with a thought-provoking production of an American classic.

“ONE BOOK, ONE SOUTHLAND” – To Kill A Mockingbird

The Center for Performing Arts in conjunction with Governors State University (GSU) invites the greater Southland community to participate in a community-wide reading program focused on this powerful book and culminating in the unique opportunity to see the play live on May 9.

Related Event

Community Forum – Wed. March 25, 2009 at 6 p.m. in Sherman Recital Hall
GSU students, faculty and Southland community members who have read the book will come together to hear from a panel of GSU faculty members, including University President Dr. Elaine Maimon, and participate in an open conversation about the book and its themes that resonate for our community.