GSU Telecourse Features Suburb Hospitals and Med Centers

Twenty hospitals or other health care facilities in the southern and western suburbs of Chicago are prominently featured throughout GSU's new "Health Care Organization" telecourse, which is scheduled to premiere on August 30 over Chicago's educational television station, WYCC-TV, Channel 20 (UHF).

While the telecourse gives a national overview of the health care industry, many of the nearly 60 experts interviewed on film and much of the documentary footage originated in south suburban area hospitals and health care centers surrounding the university.

Among the hospitals cooperating in the production of the 23 half-hour segments were St. James Hospital, Chicago Heights; South Suburban Hospital, Hazel Crest; Palos Community Hospital, Palos Heights, and St. Francis Hospital, Blue Island. Scenes also were shot in Riverside Medical Center in Kankakee.

Health care centers in the southern suburbs which were involved were Crestwood Heights Convalescent Center; Surgical Center in Suburban Heights Medical Center, Chicago Heights; Medfirst, Orland Park; Glenwood Medical Group, Joliet; Nautilus Health Club, Park Forest; Suburban Health Systems Agency, Oak Park; Chicago Heights Veterans Center, and Olympia Fields

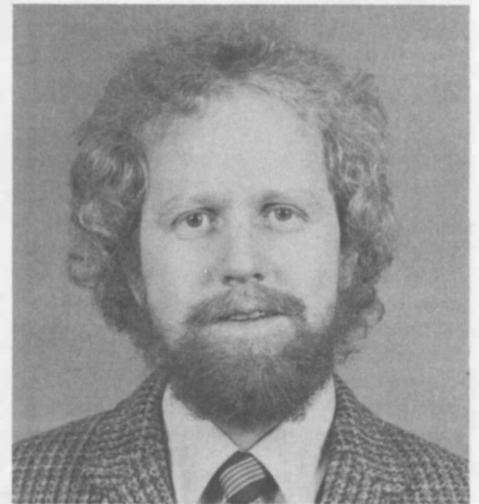

International Medical Association.

Also cooperating were the Y-Me organization in Park Forest; Tinley Park Mental Health Center, and Calumet City Police Department.

In the western suburbs, the GSU TV crews visited Wholistic Health Centers, Inc., Hinsdale; Central DuPage Hospital and Marionjoy Rehabilitation Center in Winfield, and the National College of Chiropractic in Lombard.

The producers did not have to travel far to obtain some of their interviews on national matters, because Chicago is a mecca for headquarters of health care associations. Significant input was provided by officials of the American Medical Association, American Hospital Association, Health Insurance Association of America and Blue Cross and Blue Shield. In addition, officials of several hospitals and other organizations in the Chicago area were filmed either on location or in the studios at GSU.

According to Ralph Kruse, director of GSU's Instructional Communications Center (ICC), which produced the 23-segment course, "It takes months of research, planning and instructional development before you can record the first foot of videotape. There are at least as many months of contact work, shooting on location and in the studio. Editing, more shooting, field testing, reviewing and final editing are all part of the process necessary to attain continuity and educational validity for the telecourse.

"We are just on the cutting edge of this new technology," Kruse continued. "Even as we here at GSU are putting the finishing touches on HCO, we are looking for another opportunity to prove that television can bring quality higher education to thousands of men and women in the convenience of their homes or workplaces at a cost most of them can afford."

Kruse also acknowledged the valuable advice and cooperation of the Nursing and Health Administration faculty of the School of Health Professions.

Further information about the telecourse and how to enroll for 3 hours of college credit can be obtained by interested persons with 60 or more college credit hours by calling GSU's HCO Hotline at (312) 534-2266. Those with less than 60 hours should call City Colleges of Chicago at (312) 984-2888.

Tony Labriola, producer/director of GSU's telecourse "Health Care Organization," takes no chances of falling off the table as he videotapes the patient's view of clinical care at Surgicare Center in Chicago Heights. Mike Amiot (background) is one of 12 GSU students who gained practical job experience during production of the 23-segment telecourse, which will be seen over WCCY-TV, Chicago, Channel 20, beginning August 30.

Tony also did much of the camera work for "Health Care Organization," as seen here at the Crestwood Heights (IL) Convalescent Center. Cappy Silver, one of the two anchorwomen for the 23-part telecourse, interviews residents about senior citizen health care. Production assistant Neal Nicholson, a GSU student, handles the microphone for this scene.

GSU Expands Children's Music Programs This Fall

For children who love music, and even those who don't yet know that they love it, there will be opportunities aplenty at GSU later this month.

"Come Children, Sing!" sessions for children 5 months to 5 years old starts on Tuesday morning, August 30.

The GSU Children's Chorus for third through eighth graders begins its second season that afternoon.

"Melody Bells" is a new musical adventure for kids from kindergarten through second grade which begins on Wednesday afternoon, August 31.

All three programs are under the direction of Mary Ellen Pinzino and are offered as a public service through the university's Office of Conferences and Workshops.

"Come Children, Sing," which Pinzino began as an independent endeavor in 1975, is in its second year at GSU. Children must be accompanied by a participating parent, she emphasizes. "By singing along, playing along or just going along, parents and children together become involved in children's songs and music activities that can be continued at home," she explains.

Through a grant from the Foundation for Exceptional Children, Pinzino hopes to make "Come Children, Sing!" more readily available to handicapped children. Money is available from the Bill Geer Minigrant Award Fund for a school bus to transport handicapped children to GSU from sending schools and for student stipends to help pay the cost for 100 such children.

This eight week program is offered in seven sections on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays through October 21. They are half hour classes beginning at 10 and 10:45 am, with one afternoon class scheduled at 1 pm on Thursdays.

A second eight week session will run from October 25 through December 16. There will be seven sections again. The fee for each eight week session is $10.

The Children's Chorus will give youthful singers an opportunity to develop their musicianship through the study and singing of various types of songs for this age group. No audition is necessary. The initial eight week session will meet on Tuesdays at 4:15 - 5:15 pm through October 18. The cost is $20.

"Melody Bells" will meet on Wednesdays at 4:15 - 5 pm through October 19. The children will explore a variety of musical activities. The cost is $15.

"Every child is musical," Pinzino declares. "By providing children the opportunity to explore music at their own level, we offer them the joy of experiencing music as a vital force in life and life as a vital force in music. Participation in quality musical activities enhances and enriches a child's development as a human being as well as a musician." For further information, contact Pinzino at (312) 534-5000, extension 2463, or the Office of Conferences and Workshops on extension 2436.

Conference Papers

Dr. Goodman-Malamuth recently returned from the Communication Association of the Pacific's International conference in Seoul, Korea and the C.A.P. American conference in Hawaii. He was the keynote speaker at both conferences and has placed conference papers covering a variety of communication topics on GSU reserve in the library for any staff/students or others who might be interested in reading them. A topical list of titles and authors is available with the papers.

Veterans of Innovation

Forum was created to afford the members of the GSU community an opportunity for dialogue and colloquy. If there is any place in the world suited to the expression of opposing ideas and subsequent discussion of them, it must certainly be the environs of a university.

The Forum depends for its continued existence upon contributions from Inscapes readers... HELP, HELP!
