GSU President, Others Focus On Education Concerns

Dr. Leo Goodman-Malamuth II, president of GSU, and the presidents of other public universities in Illinois will focus on the growing concern about the quality of America's schools at a first-of-its kind conference on Tuesday, Feb. 28.

The unique Presidents' Conference on Excellence in Illinois Education will be held at Illinois State University, Normal. It is sponsored by ISU and the Washington-based American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU). All sessions are open to the general public.

Goodman-Malamuth will be part of the 2:45-4:15 pm session dealing with professional development of educational personnel. He will talk about "Certification and Competency Exams: What Should Be Tested."

ISU Pres. Lloyd Watkins will open the conference at 10 am. Allan Ostar, president of AASCU, will be the closing speaker at 4:15. In between, eight presidents of AASCU member schools in Illinois, including George Ayers of Chicago State University, will probe various aspects of problems facing education in the state.

The conference is expected to attract key legislators, state and local school officials, members of boards of education and university faculty involved in education programs.

Filmmaker Shows Latest Documentary At GSU

Marian Marzynski, CAS professor of filmmaking and internationally acclaimed producer of documentaries, will present the premiere showing of his latest film "Jewish Mother," as part of a free public lecture at GSU on Wednesday, Feb. 19, at 10:30 am in Engbretson Hall.

Sculpture Added to GSU Collection

Another sculpture has been added to the GSU collection, a monumental work that dominates the entrance to the Hall of Governors. The powerful form, a design by California artist Jan de Swart, is a glued laminated (glulam) sculpture originally commissioned by a Chicago based development company for the Lincoln Mall Shopping center in Matteson. It was donated to the university by the Lincoln Mall Management Company, Charles Cope, center manager.

The sculpture is an intriguing piece, consisting of four major undulating curves of laminated wood that reach upward, drawing the eye to the top of the work which nearly touches one of the skylights that let light into the Hall. Between the curves are plywood shapes, triangles and rectangles, which contribute to the overall effect and provide structural support for the one-ton sculpture.

De Swart's work was donated to the university last fall but it was not until this month that logistical problems inherent in moving such a large artwork were solved. The huge sculpture had to be hauled, in two sections, up the slope that stretches down from the Hall of Governors patio, through a space created by the temporary removal of two window sections and so to its position by the trees near the information booth. It was then reassembled, balanced, aligned, and set in concrete.

The nearly 40 ft. tall sculpture is being cleaned and given a new coat of paint. According to John Payne, sculptor-in-residence, "It will become, in time, as much a part of GSU as the trees that grace the Hall of Governors and the sounds of students discussing their midterms."

GSU Experts Conduct Quality Control Seminars

"Quality in goods and services does not just happen. Management makes it happen, but many American managers simply do not know how," claims Robert Hart, BPA professor of management and an international authority on quality control.

To teach American business managers how they can recapture the world markets lost to the superior quality of Japanese goods, GSU is sponsoring three seminars on statistical control of process quality during the next three months. Two introductory seminars will be held on March 5-9 and May 14-18, and an advanced seminar will be on April 16-20. All meetings will be at the Sheraton International Hotel, 6810 N. Mannheim Rd., Rosemont, near O'Hare Airport.

Statistical control of process quality, based primarily on the Shewhart methods and pioneered in the 1950s by W. Edwards Deming, is given credit for the revolution in Japanese manufacturing. Hart, a student of Deming, is a leading proponent of the methods in the U.S. With his wife, Marilyn Hart also of BPA, he has been consultant for major American firms, such as Ford Motor Co. and others among the Fortune 500. They also have been retained by Bharat Heavy Electricals Ltd. in India, a major manufacturer of power generation equipment.

During the introductory seminar, participants can become competent in the use of the simple but powerful quality control tools used by the Japanese. The sessions concentrate on the basic elements of process control, relying heavily upon run charts and Shewhart control charts as tools to help improve quality and productivity.

The advanced seminar will provide a brief review of the philosophy and mechanics of using those charts. Participants then will get into the practical use of control charts for the many applications which do not fit the ideal circumstance of a single product manufactured on a high volume assembly line. Prerequisite is an introductory seminar in control chart methods or the consent of the instructors.

Seminars are held from 8:30 am until 4:30 pm Monday through Friday. The cost of $795 includes "Statistical Process Control Training Workbook," by Marilyn K. Hart and Robert F. Hart, a calculator with statistical functions, control chart forms and a materials packet. Luncheon each day and coffee breaks also are included.

For further information about the seminars or registration, contact the Office of Conferences and Workshops at GSU, extension 2436.

Included were eight scholastically superior recent community college graduates and four students presently finishing their junior year here. To achieve a second full-tuition award, these students had to maintain a grade point average above 3.5 at GSU.

GSU Hosts Junior College Jazz Festival

GSU will host its 13th Annual Junior College Jazz Festival on Saturday, March 10, beginning at 9 am. About 25 high school and community college bands will vie for individual and group honors. Clark Terry, long-time trumpet soloist with Duke Ellington, heads a judges' panel of seven professional jazzmen. ## Special Photo Course Combines Theory, Practice

For photographers interested in nature/landscape picture taking, a special workshop combining theory and practice is being offered by GSU during March and April.

Under the tutelage of Paul Schranz, CAS professor of photography, participants will discuss historical and contemporary theory of such well-known photographers as Ansel Adams, Wynn Bullock, Eliot Porter and Edward Weston. In addition, they will take four field trips to put those theories into practice.

Students will photograph river scenes at the Des Plaines Conservation Area; the prairie at Goose Lake Prairie State Park; and general landscape at Mathiessen State Park and Moraine Hills State Park.

Each participant will prepare a final project of 20 transparencies or 20 archival silver prints or color prints taken on the field trips, which formulate their personal approach to nature/landscape photography. Sessions will be held on Thursdays and Saturdays beginning on March 1. The course is available for 3 hours of college credit, or students may take the course for noncredit.

For registration, class time, cost and other information, call the division of communication at GSU, extension 2446.

Students Receive Talent Scholarships

Nancy Clayton, Wood Dale, a graduate painting student in CAS, has won a $300 talent scholarship. The cash award was donated by Barbara W. Graham, formerly of Matteson and now living in Florida, who earned the M.A. in visual arts at GSU in 1981. Graham also had received a talent scholarship and expressed the desire to pass it on to another worthy student. Dr. Leo Goodman-Malamuth II (left) university president, and William H. Dodd, chief executive officer of the GSU Foundation, made the presentation.

A Note From the Director Of University Relations

Beginning Monday, February 27th, candidates will be interviewed for the position of Director of University Relations. I encourage GSUers to participate in interviewing the candidates. (For information about the schedule of interviews please call the Office of University Relations, ex. 2419.)

This position has been approved by the president primarily for two reasons: 1. to maximize the public relations impact of this office; 2. to free some personnel for more activity in direct development.

My title will become "Executive Coordinator of University Advancement." The new Director of University Relations will report to me. Ginni Burghardt, the Executive Coordinator of Alumni Relations, will continue to report to me and will enjoy an additional title, "Associate Director of Development."

The new Director of University Relations will have no direct development responsibilities. Rather, her/his responsibilities will be in the areas of media relations and publications.

William H. Dodd

To All Employees: Use Of Private Vehicles on GSU Business

The laws of the state of Illinois (Ill. Rev. State, Ch. 95-1/2 Par. 10-101) require that employees using privately owned vehicles on university business maintain liability insurance coverages for that vehicle of at least the following:

Death/Bodily injury: $15,000 per person
$30,000 maximum
per occurrence
Property damage: $10,000 per occurrence

As a result of the most recent compliance audit, the university must establish procedures to ensure that employees using privately owned vehicles have the required insurance coverages. Henceforth, all employees requesting reimbursement for mileage must include on the travel voucher the following certification:

I certify compliance with Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 95-1/2, Par. 10-101, regarding liability insurance.

Thank you for your cooperation.
