of Thorn Creek according to CEAS students. In a fall research project in the learning module "Water Quality Research" DAGMAR CAMERON and KATHLEEN ISAACSON (CEAS Students) along with RON BRUBAKER (CEAS) cited abuses found in water samplings: "Branches cut from trees in the area had been piled across the creek interrupting its flow. A hole approximately 1 foot from the stream had been filled with used motor oil. A box of dirt had been thrown into the middle of the creek." The result of all of this is stagnant and polluted water abnormally affecting aquatic life and upsetting the ecological balance.

HARVARD BLAMED FOR ENERGY CRISIS...Under "Arab Halfbacks," Art Buchwald in Dec. 18 Washington Post finds that the "real villain of the fuel crisis is the Harvard Business School." Buchwald's Professor Applebaum explains: "Almost every sheikh now in charge of oil policy for his country was trained at Harvard [where they were] taught how to sell oil, raise prices, and demand outrageous profits...Had these same sons of Arab potentates been sent to the University of Alabama, Oklahoma or Texas, they would be involved in developing football teams instead of putting the screws to everyone."

QUOTE OF THE WEEK...From TULSI SARAL (CHLD) noting GSU's problems involved in moving and growing, "It only shows we're alive."

CHILDREN'S THEATER TOURING COMPANY...coordinated by TED WHEELER and TEMMIE GILBERT (CCS) includes 12 children from 6 communities. The company is available for performances of "Androcles and the Lion" and can be booked by calling Ext. 311 at the mini-campus. Among the reactions by audiences of the company was one from a child who declared "It was the best movie I ever saw."

TOWN-GOWN COLLABORATION...is proposed for GSU in a report of the Educational Facilities Laboratory sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts. The report, "The Place of the Arts in New Towns" suggests, "it pays off for new-town arts if the collaborating institution is neither too big...nor too unpredictable. Since GSU proclaims the arts as one of its central concerns, and since the administration and faculty are enthusiastic about what they are doing and what Park Forest South could be, it would appear that a unique town-gown collaboration in the arts could be one outgrowth of the union."

ANOTHER QUOTE OF THE WEEK...noting an unusual calm before a storm, a GSUer suggested, "You're in trouble when you're not in trouble."

FROM THE FARMER'S ALMANAC..."Food prices are so high that even vegetarians are starting to beef."

JAZZ KEEPS ROLLING...The GSU Jazz Ensemble rapidly gaining widespread recognition, gives a free public concert at Rich South High School on February 6 at 8:00 p.m. WARRICK CARTER (CCS) directs the group.

Papers should be submitted by students to committee members BOBBY MILLS, BETHE HAGEN, ALMA WALKER, HUGH RANK, or MEL SLOTT.

JUNGLE ALIVE...The final Audubon Wildlife Film for this year, "The Living Jungle," about the wildlife on Barro Colorado Island, a sanctuary in the Panama Canal Zone, will be presented on Monday, February 4, at 8:00 p.m. at Hickory Elementary School in Park Forest South. The film series has been co-sponsored by CEAS and Thorn Creed Audubon Society. See JOHN CHAMBERS (CEAS) for tickets.
