MIDNIGHT OIL PUTS OUT FIRE...Registration went smoothly on Monday and Tuesday, but few in the University know how close GSU came to a catastrophe. Only truly heroic activity on the part of A & R last week-end averted disaster. At 6:15 P.M. last Friday, Andy Anderson (A&R) noticed two small errors had been made at the cooperative computer center.* Further investigation revealed that these errors resulted in all the data for the Mon./Tues. registration being totally inaccurate! Faced with this eleventh hour crisis A&R had only one choice. All information had to be corrected. The University owes a special thanks to Dick Newman (A&R), Ron Miller (AA), Sam Rice and Dave Nadolna (CCC) who labored until 11:00 P.M. Friday and from 9:00 A.M. Saturday to 5:00 P.M. Sunday correcting the mistakes. Thanks also to A & R personnel Jim Lohman, Andy Anderson, Dennis Coatar, Ann Felton and Richard Johnson who logged long weekend hours to help. Our hats are off to A & R! *In Elmhurst.

Chemist stirs up new career formula

By Phyllis Feuerstein

A WOMAN contemplating a career change that seems miles removed from her present interest isn't necessarily suffering an identity crisis. More likely, she sees a new self in the mirror of her learning experiences.

"It's a part of maturation," said Dr. Elizabeth Stanley, whose doctorate degree is in analytical chemistry. "Other interests can develop in the most satisfying job."

Her career is an example. As a chemist, she's supposed to be concerned with structures of substances and their transformation. But two years ago, she became coordinator of the Board of Governors program at Governor's State University, Park Forest South.

In her new career, she concerns herself with the interest structure of adults and their transformation into professionals with careers of their choice.

"IT BEGAN as a half-time job," Stanley said in her customary soft voice. "I became intrigued by the learning experiences that can be translated into college credit. Two years ago, I committed myself to the program full time."

Often, she compares herself to students at the university who are making a career change. A community volunteer may have decided she wants credentials for her expertise to get paid. A housewife may have become career-oriented or someone in a stagnant position tries for a more stimulating one by upgrading skills.

"Any new career needs more training," Stanley said. "I've taken courses, seminars, and workshops. Just having the interest isn't enough."

When does the green light go on — the one that indicates it's time to move? Among Stanley's students in the program, the signals begin to flash when they prepare a portfolio for admission to the program.

It has been designed for the mature student with previous college credit who has reached a level of proficiency in some areas comparable to undergraduate work.

"ALL PREVIOUS learning is evaluated by a board as credits for a degree," Stanley explained.

To qualify as a Board of Governors student, an applicant prepares a portfolio listing skills and accomplishments and an autobiography that details the acquired learning outcome of such experiences. For instance, a school board member might have acquired detailed knowledge of educational planning or a Sunday school teacher might have extensive experience in research and library skills if she has written a curriculum.

"After preparing a portfolio, a woman gets a better idea of her skills and interests," Stanley said. "It might give her a clue on how to develop them or aid in directing her to a field she likes best."

The preparation of a portfolio is analogous to attending career workshops because each leads to a better understanding of abilities.

"MY OWN GRADUAL change of emphasis developed at the university," Stanley said. "I attribute my new focus to my own maturation. I got a better sense of what I want to do."

The 34-year-old wife, mother, professor, and coordinator has "no regrets" at shifting gears. She keeps her hand in science by teaching air and water pollution classes.

"I'm still committed to education but my interest has moved from the abstract to adults," she said.

GSUINGS...JOHN ROHR (BPS) chairing a panel on "Current Ethical Problems in Career Civil Service" at the annual meeting of the American Society for Public Administration in Atlanta...DANIEL CASAGRANDE and KRISTINE SIEFERT (EAS) collaborating on "Origins of Sulfur in Coal: Importance of the Ester Sulfate Content of Peat" published in Feb. '77 issue of Science...TULSI SARAL (HLD) speaking at "Toward the Urban University" conference at Northeastern Illinois University...ROSCOE D. PERRITT (BPS) and GENE R. MANDY (BPS grad student) winning first place award presented by the National Assoc. of Accountants for their article "Account Monitoring and Cash Management"...DONALD HERZOG (BPS) being selected by the Graduate School of Industrial Administration, Carnegie-Mellon University to attend the Summer Institute in Advanced Management Studies...ALMA WALKER-VINYARD (CCS) participating in International Black Writers Seventh Annual Conference "Creating a Better World" in Chicago.

"His performance almost equals mine — taking care of six kids, a job and a house at the same time."
