King Holiday Program
Encourages Reflection and Action

by Barbara A Johnson

On Wednesday, Jan. 14, an annual Martin Luther King Memorial Program was held at GSU. It was well attended by local high school students along with a GSU staff and students. The keynote speaker was Dr. Jawanza Kunjufu of African-American Images in Chicago. His talk centered on what African-Americans need to do for themselves in terms of improving their self-image, understanding their history and developing loving relationships among themselves. "More than 100 years ago, they removed the chains from our ankles, but they put them around our minds," Dr. Kunjufu stated.

To do this, Dr. Kunjufu stressed that African-Americans must work at involving youth in cultural activities, tutorial programs, preparing rates of passage into adulthood, giving money for college scholarships and developing African-American owned businesses.

In celebration of Dr. King, Dr. Kunjufu insists African-Americans need to reexamine the civil rights leader's values. "He was smart. He graduated from high school at 15. He was first a minister; he loved Jesus. He was also a civil rights leader and an organizer." King was an author, lecturer, loving husband and good father. "He was a very committed man," Dr. Kunjufu said.

Dr. Kunjufu stressed that the concept of non-violence is little unless "resistance is evidenced by his life.

Actor Percy Littlton, an actor who recreates speeches given by Dr. King, performed the "The Dilemma and the Challenge" sermon delivered by Dr. King at the Mt. Zion Hill Baptist Church in Los Angeles in 1962. This is the speech about the future of African-Americans and that Dr. King did not expect to be around to see the fruition of his labors. It gives encouragement to excellence in the Black community. Start being the best right where you are, it is one of the main points.

The program closed with stirring gospel music performed by soloist LaDonna Sims, accompanied on the piano by Willys Barrow. The civil rights anthem, "We Shall Overcome" was sung by the audience with the non-traditional joining of hands.

GSU Is In A Lose-Lose Position

UNIVERSITY PARK – The Illinois General Assembly's latest budget reductions in higher education funding are exacerbating cuts already made at Governors State University during the winter trimester.

The latest round of budget cuts approved by the legislature Jan. 21 total more than $528,000, forcing curtailments in equipment purchases and services. The reductions are expected to have a negative effect on educational services.

"This is not a win-lose situation," GSU President Leo Goodman-Malamuth II said. "This is a lose-lose situation. The university loses, the students lose and the state of Illinois loses, and eventually it will be the workforce that loses because we are educating the future employees of this state.

This winter trimester, GSU was forced to drop approximately 100 class sections because of 11 vacant faculty positions and a $250,000 reduction in adjunct faculty salaries.

Students' frustration levels are rising, according to Dr. Jay Lubinsky, dean of the College of Health Professions, who has received petitions and letters from students asking for additional class offerings.

"We (at the university) look like the bad guys because we don't have the class sections, but we are forced to make these cuts because of state funding reductions," he added.

Reducions in equipment and book purchases means the University Library will be forced to curtail many purchases of library books and serials. Instructional equipment purchases will not be made, despite emphasis by a visiting North Central accrediting team that GSU update its laboratory equipment.

"We are having difficulty even repairing our old equipment," Dr. Joyce Vetvett, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences said. "We can't even keep our inventory of equipment current. Our arts and sciences programs are equipment-intensive. We're not talking about just biology and chemistry, but computer science, media communications, photography." A drop in the commodities budget means the university's purchasing power is being further eroded, limiting the staff's abilities to purchase even basics such as office supplies.

Although some have suggested the university raise tuition to make up for the deficit, that is not a feasible solution, according to Dr. Linda Hesser, director of budget and planning. The university's budget is segregated into general revenue and income funds. Tuition is part of the income fund. Transfers between the two funds are rare.
Cultural Diversity And Affirmative Action Awards Program

AWARD 3200 EGIS

ELIGIBILITY Any unit or organization within the University who has made significant contributions in enhancing cultural diversity and/or affirming action on behalf of women, minorities, or persons with disabilities during calendar year 1991.

PURPOSE To recognize the reward University groups which support the University's efforts to achieve a diverse campus environment. The awards will honor those departments or organizations that have gone beyond their stated mission within the University to promote equality for all by seeking to eliminate barriers, remedy past inequities, and provide aid and incentives for those who have historically been adversely affected by discriminating practices.

WHEN Friday, April 10, 1992, at the Cultural Diversity and Affirmative Action Awards Banquet.

WHERE Hall of Honors, Governors State University

GUEST SPEAKER Dr. Nancy Raby Barlowe is currently Dean of Academic Affairs for the University of Iowa. She also is Director of Opportunty in Iowa. She will speak on "Cultural Identity and Diversity: Focus on Women."

APPLICATION & CRITERIA Any unit of the University, including student organizations, may nominate themselves or be nominated by individuals. To qualify the group must have demonstrated by behavior a unique commitment to the spirit of cultural diversity and affirmative action and any one of the following:

1. Developed and implemented specific strategies such as re-recruitment, admissions, employment, retention and support services to enhance access and broaden representation women, minorities and persons with disabilities in traditionally under-represented areas within the University.

2. Focused an atmosphere conducive to internal resolution of concerns relative to cultural diversity and affirmative action.

3. Provided creative solutions and positive results in activities which enhance cultural diversity and affirmative action.

4. With our comprehensive application & nominations.

5. Consistent with University's diversity program.

6. Applications must be received by the President's office no later than March 2. 1992. Applications are due in the President's office or may be requested by calling (708) 534-5000 ext 2229. A separate application must be made for each category.

Let the pros at BAR/BD WORK their magic for you!

Great Scores

GUTS

by Barbara Johnson

RETHINKING COLUMBUS... Is a special edition magazine for parents and educators who refuse to REGURGITATE the story of 1492 and the 500 YEARS OF INJUSTICE that followed. Can't find it on a newsstand, however. Send $10 to Rethinking Schools, 1001 E. 60th Ave., Milwaukee, WI 53212 and specify the Columbus Special.

MORE CHILDREN AGES THREE TO NINETEEN... due to impaired driving from the rain. From now on, the rain will wash away chemicals from the car. You can't make sure there's a designated driver to get you HOME SAFE if you're MADD about drunk driving, call the South Suburban Chapter of MADD at (708) 489-MADD.

SMILE ALL THE WHILE... as plaque is removed from a nominal fee at Prairie State College's Dental Hygiene Clinic. Three hours may seem a long time, but the students want an 'A', so they DO THE BEST JOB. Low cost x-rays are also available. An added bonus: you get to PARK RIGHT OUT IN FRONT. Call (708) 709-3707 to make an appointment.

ONE PINT CAN HELP THREE PATIENTS... only if the blood is pliable. Real blood cells can only be used for patients when they are in a state of preserving which calcium is known as a factor in maintaining the health of the blood.

CRETE TO HOLD ART FAIR

As if celebrating the mid-winter, the doors will open to the public, Saturday, February 15th, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Crete Art Fair. Then, the Fair's host, First National Co-Chairman, Nita Blessing and Jeannine Hout, not only will advertise art but also will encourage you to see what kinds of meeting, planning, and viewing which have achieved. But for now, the result looks more and more promising as the big day draws near.

It is not only the very warm response so many have given to exhibit their work at the Crete Art Fair, but the generosity of its Patron sponsors and the diligent work of the members of the Crete Woman's Club, by which the event is sponsored, who will be responsible for the anticipated success.

While most of the Club members were still reviewing their best recipes, the homemade baked goods to be sold at the Fair, some with the number of fingers were busy making the leftovers which will be picked up at the day. Whoa! Mrs. Theodore's, Ellen Dauphney's, Marilyn Golty's and Nature's Own will be the liveliest alfajors? Any panel judges would be hard put to make a choice for the

$1,000 in cash awards to winning artists at the 19th annual, the prestigious panel of judges is formed of four Park area artists and art teachers.

Kitty Begani and Nan Lachman will be judging the crafts, while John Cohn, Delores Fortuna and Ula May Bergewill judge the fine art/ fine arts crafts.

The Crete Art Fair will be held at the Balmorral Park Race Track. Route 1, West of 394 and just a few miles South of the Village of Crete Ampipe. Parking is available. Admission is $3.00 per adult and free to children under 12. The proceeds of the Crete Art Fair are the main fundraiser for the Crete Woman's Club's many area philanthropies.

How learns Man's How learns Man's How learns Man's How learns Man's Communication

Humans need valentines to announce their feelings, but how do different animals attract a mate?

Meet at the Gibson Woods Nature Center, 2901 Parrish Avenue in Hammond, Saturday, February 15 at 1 p.m. Please pre-register by calling (219) 844-3188.
Well, you're here! You have traveled from a community college system or you have decided to return to school after attending another college or university. You are at Governors State University. What is this place really like and how do you not only survive but thrive in this environment? Well that kind of help is what I hope to provide readers through this column. I hope to become a friend as well as a source of interesting information about the life of a commuter student at Governors State University.

Where will I be coming from? Who cares what he has done? However, good questions deserve straight answers. Sure I work here and I want to keep my job in this busy job market. but this column is voluntary. How did I get here? Why did I choose a career in working with commuter students? Why do I care about the life at commuter as part of the University? Well, I'm a community college graduate who also attended private residential schools during my travels. I've been single and married while attending school. I have attended school prior to military service and after military service. Yes, as you have guessed I'm getting older. In fact I was one of the first students who decided to give this university a try back in March of 1972. The University opened for the first time in the fall of 1971. It was touted as a place where the word competition was not on playing it but trying courses you might not have attempted if you were in the hunt for a grade. The emphasis was on attempting success in a variety of disciplines. Failure wasn't final but rather success not yet achieved. You can see the influence of the 1960's in many of these perspectives at this young university.

The students were a motley group, as "relevance" did not require a dress code. Nondals were prevalent and unique- aromatic smells could sometimes be detected in meeting rooms as informal debate raged over the latest political perspective for the country. You were immediately impressed by the variety of students you encountered; women, males, young, old, people of color, and various ethnic and cultural traditions.

Faculty members often couldn't be distinguished from the students. This was a result of not only their similar ages but their sexes, ages, and races. You found more women and people of color among the faculty than you could find at most universities. There was a large area we met in called the common. This area had food dispensers, but no hot or recently prepared food. Consequently you found most people bringing brown bags filled with strange mixtures of edibles. Classes were small, usually a maximum of twenty but sometimes as few as five. You took only two or three classes for a full-time undergraduate load. These classes were supposed to be completed within an eight week session. Some of your class meetings might be held at the home of your instructor. You often found yourself going off after class with your instructor to continue your class discussions. Communication on campus was informal and speed of mouth transmission seemed to be very effective.

Well, a lot has changed and a lot has not changed since those days. Twenty years later our campus building is much larger. We have a much larger student population. We offer more programs and degrees, and have a much larger state and state of the art library. We now have a Campus Center for students. It provides for other additional charge an Olympic size pool, racquetball courts, exercise room, lockers, showers, and more to come on this in later columns. Our facility continues, in my humble opinion to be one of our greatest strengths. Yes, and some of the original members of the academy are thankfully still with us, but only Professor Bob Press might still be seen in a brown bag of food on a warm day.

The University is building a tradition. Our alumni are our greatest legacy to society. We do not have a football team, or a lot of well publicized activities. We do have a community that students become members of when they enroll on our campus. This community of people can be our strength. I hope that in the weeks to come that this column might help you to better understand the opportunities for you in this community and provide you with easy access to its activities.

I want to hear what you are interested in as a student at Governors State University, so please write. Send your correspondence to "Commuter Life" in care of the Innovator, Governors State University, University Park, Ill. 60466 .

Welcome!

APOLGIES: We apologize for not printing Commuter Life as was requested. It is being reprinted as the author intended it to read.
Capital gains, what a joke!
Sue Navarro
CBPA, undergrad
Lansing

He wants alot done, but he's reacting to late.
Jim Bartolotta
CBPA, undergrad
Bridgeview

I like him. It was a good speech.
Madha Talamarla
CAS, undergrad
Flossmoor

I was busy writing a research paper. I didn't hear it.
Fanciner Felton
BOG, undergrad
Chicago

I cannot tell a lie; now I remember why I never wanted the job in the first place.
George Washington
BOP (Board of Presidents)

Somewhere Out There
Is A Good Candidate

Bill Facklem

With less than a year left until the Presidential election I decided to do an informal survey to determine the political mood of my friends and co-workers. Suspecting that the Democratic party was in serious trouble I set out to prove it by asking just about everyone I know if they could name at least one Democratic candidate running for the presidency. I thought that, with so many candidates to choose from, everybody should be able to name at least one.

Much to my chagrin (I love working in those worn out expressions) I set out to prove it by asking just about everyone I polled weren't able to name even one President hopeful. The ignorance seemed to permeate the social stratum that most of the people I polled weren't able to name even one Presiden tial hopeful. The ignorance seemed to permeate the social stratum: young, old, wealthy, poor were all equally ignorant about the candidates.

The responses I received ranged from "Some guy in Arkansas who cheats on his wife" to "Mario Cuomo, who most of us will remember as the man who wiped out at the last minute after playing hard to get long enough to discourage any serious candidate from entering the race. Governor Marriott's excuse for not running was that he wanted to put New York's fiscal problems in order before taking on any new task. It's kind of like taking the time to requisit the deck of a sinking ship, considering the economic problems facing the entire nation. Remarkably, some polls show him as the most popular candidate despite his refusal to answer the call.

If there is any credibility to what the advertising people tell us about product recognition and consumer choices, the Democratic party appears to be in some very big trouble. All in all, this Presidential race looks as if George Bush could win it in a walk.

The last line is that I refuse to give up hope that somewhere out there is a candidate that can hold his sushi and defeat George Bush in November.
Does the Area Really Need a Third Airport, or is This Just a Scam

To some, it hovers like a dark threatening cloud. To others, it shines like a heavenly beacon projecting wealth, prosperity, and hope. To yet others, it represents all of the above. The "it" I'm referring to is the continuing debate over a new airport, or more commonly (and inaccurately) referred to as the "Third Airport." After years of analyzing Passenger Emplacement figures, Ground Transportation Access reports, Environmental Impact statements, and a veritable plethora of additional air-related data, it appears that the decision on where to place the proposed airport is among the most contentious in recent years.

If it seems like the decision process has taken forever, that's probably because it has. The idea of another major airport to supplement O'Hare and Midway is hardly new. The late Mayor Richard J. Daley proposed building an airport on the southern shores of Lake Michigan back in the late 1960's. That project went through the process of "crosstown expressway," and died due to a lack of money and public support. The idea of a new airport came to life again, when State Senator Aldo DeAngelis called for the creation of a new regional airport authority. Selection for the most proposed sites for an airport date back to late 1988.

In the past two decades, air travel demands have continually increased, while simultaneously, the population in the suburban areas around O'Hare International has exploded. This growth has hardly been a panacea though, as more and more jets continue to roar overhead. People complained to their respective mayors and representatives about the omnipresent noise problem. These relatively tiny suburbs constitute the City of Chicago with their problems, but many of these complaints seemed to fall on deaf ears. (Deaf ears were becoming increasingly plentiful.) Faced with this dilemma, the suburbs around O'Hare formed a sort of "Multinational Coalition" to deal with Chicago's heavy-handed political clout. Elk Grove Village, Niles, Schiller Park and DePage counties (just to name a few) formed what is now called the Suburban O'Hare Commission (SOC). Its mission being, "A joint and cooperative effort to represent the interests of citizens affected by O'Hare International Airport. Additional runway expansion has consistently been blasted by the SOC, who has successfully block­ed the expansion and construction of new runways. The City of Chicago and others have pointed out that most of the residents living near O'Hare should have anticipated noise problems, before deciding to locate there. This is definitely a logical argument, given that O'Hare Airport was there well before all the new people came. The logic gets blurred though, when you factor in airport expansion. Many were caught off guard, and never anticipated that the noise and pollution would continually increase. Public outrage over airport noise is certainly not limited to O'Hare Airport. The issue plagues airports throughout the United States. Debate continues to brew, in light of recent studies which suggest that chronic exposure to noise causes stress and negative impacts on health, similar to those associated with smoking, and high cholesterol. In retrospect the government should have never allowed construction within the O'­Hare perimeter.

Formally known as a "Barrier Zone" the plan has wisely been incorporated into the plans for Denver Colorado's new airport. This is stated clearly in Denver's airport impact statement, which reads, "The new airport is proposed to be con­structed in a rural area, thus reducing the number of per­sons exposed to significant noise impacts." It appears that we have learned from past mistakes, that airports do not belong in heavily populated urban areas. Or have we?

Originally proposed by the consulting firm of Pete Marwick several years ago, possible locations for the Illinois Indiana regional airport were narrowed down to three rural sites and an urban site in Gary. Three rural sites included one in western Kankakee, another between Peotone and Beecher IL, and a third site located between Beecher and Cedar Lake Indiana. The urban proposal involved expansion of the Gary airport. Soon thereafter the consulting firm of Tibbet, Abbott, McCarthy and Strat­ton (TAMS) began an exten­sive study to determine the feasibility of each site, and recommend which site to choose based on their analysis. TAMS did a similar study for the Dallas/Fort Worth airport, and was con­sidered by the airport consultants to be highly qualified. A consulting team was developed, each con­centrating on their respective areas of expertise. The staggering number of studies TAMS conducted would eventually cost about $40 million. With the site selection process already underway, Mayor Daley unveiled a new airport site on February 14, 1990, which became known as the Lake Calumet Air­port. Many chuckled in dis­belief at the idea since it in­volved the destruction of ten thousand homes, several hundred businesses, and the cleanup of huge landfills and hazardous waste sites. The chances for Lake Calumet being chosen seemed slim indeed, given the fact that the Bistate commission set up to debate the site selec­tion issue was comprised of four members from Illinois who had somewhat Republican affiliations. The guffaws ceased though, when Mayor Daley began wielding his political clout to change the entire site selection process. Thanks to his buddy Sam Skinner who previously worked for the RTA, and then became the U.S. Transportation secretary, Daley managed to have the rules changed. Under the changes, Chicago was al­lowed to add three of its own selected members to repre­sent the Bistate Commis­sion. Additionally the rules change prevented TAMS consultants from making a site selection recommenda­tion. TAMS role was reduced to only being able to present its data which ranked the respective sites. Translation: Daley pulled a fast one. Chicago is in Illinois, as are now some members of the Bistate panel. Indiana continues to have only four, maybe should be renamed the "Biased State" commission.

Meanwhile there have been more estimates for the Lake Calumet and Gary sites put forth than you'd find at an antique auction. TAMS estimates for each of the air­port sites range from about four billion dollars for each of the rural sites, to $9.1 bil­lion for Gary, and $17.4 bil­lion for Lake Calumet. As expected Mayor Daley and his 'point man' Robert Repel have disputed the cost estimates, and hired their own consultants to come up with more favorable results. Indi­ana has done the same with the Gary site, managing to shave off about three billion dollars by tweaking with runway locations. Both Gary and Lake Cal have moved runways away from landfills and hazardous waste. While TAMS assumed toxic waste would be incinerated, Chicago and Gary have proposed "solidifying" toxic wastes and using the solid matter for land filling and "decorative" sound barriers. (I'm not kidding.)

With all the haggling, it seems that Chicago and Gary have made themselves, as well as the consultants, look like fools. That's most unfortunate...at least for the consultants, especially TAMS, who over the past two and half years, has had to brave angry mobs who were invited to participate in the Citizen Advisory Committee. The Committee was created as a forum for the public to ask specific ques­tions and air their concerns. In so doing, the TAMS report was unique, in that it scrutinized the competing sites and drafted an En­vironmental Impact study for each site before any recommendations were

Continued on Page 8
Shortage of contributions will not slow the carillon, hang the bells from here.

Now that the other entry is open, will the trampag grow cobwebs? It's purpose is to prevent people from littering the plasticware. Personally, I just wash and re-use mine.

Big Brother can't watch you...his monitors are yet to be installed.

Tablets block the exit in the library. The door that is the exit has no sign above it. Also, the smoking section beyond these doors is open Governors Hall, allowing the smoke to filter into the Hall. Cough, Cough!
Trip over these (found in many parts of the university) and fly to your next class. The one on the right, located in the Innovator office, serves a practical purpose. By standing on it and rocking it back and forth, it is possible to unplug the computer.

Welcome to the dark side of the library.

Don't have a dog to eat your homework? Get stuck in the elevator in E building and have a good excuse for never getting to class on time.

Raindrops are falling on their heads, but now the water damage must be cleaned up in E building.
Visory forum, there was hope amongst the public that the no build option became in- meet meetings of the Citizens Ad- adults, more typically eling to Hegewisch residents tout- 200 these meetings were held her. at the noon classes, and a limited number of etaining four members, like William Daley, Mayor Daley’s brother. (Is this nepotism, or what?) Bill Daley is presi- dent and CEO of Amal- gamated Trust And Savings Bank. (Hmmm, don’t banks usually finan- cially construct?) Or what about Bob Healy another Chicago member who is also the president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Could you im-agine him saying, “Let’s get rid of the no build option, this area doesn’t need any more jobs.” Indiana’s David Bohc- nowski, another Bistate member is also President

Quickie Quinise

by Barbara A. Johnson

Are you tired all the time even though you’re getting plenty of sleep. Yes, it’s the stress of school, job, and home. Yes, it’s the cold weather and lack of sunlight. But it can also be because you’re eating a diet that is high in salt, sugar, and processed foods which can make you feel too tired to even wash your face. We often try to get iron from beef, which makes us sleep as it takes a long time to digest. Even eating us makes us sleep, as we can feel too wash up even to cook.

Greens are very high in iron and calcium. Don’t be too concerned if you have them in your diet as well. Most calcium-rich foods together block the absorption of calcium in the body, it seems that happens in that way in test tubes, but not in the human body. This recipe is quick as it is stir-fried. It has a sweet and sour flavor great because of the addition of some sweet red pepper.

Paprika n Greens

2 c. cut up greens (mustard, collards, beet, turnip)
1/2 c. sliced fresh red pepper
2 T. oil
1 T. honey
1 T. vinegar
1 l. tamari soy sauce
1 1/2 L. Mrs. Dash pepper to taste
1. Warm oil in a saute pan
2. Add pepper and collards first, cook a minute or two
3. Add rest of greens, cook three to five minutes
4. Add honey, vinegar, and seasonings
5. Cook for another minute, but don’t overcook.

Airport-Contd. from p.5

made. More typically developers take a ‘shoot first, and ask questions later’ approach to environmental issues. Several of these meetings were held here at the GSU theater. An eclectic mix of people ranging from Farmers wanting “NO AIRPORT” tee shirts to Hegewisch residents tout- "STOP DANEY NO" buttons. The concerns certainly got an earful of com- plaints from people located near each of the sites. Original plans for the airport theme seemed more unified. Everyone appeared adamantly against the airport sites being developed. In the earliest meetings and during the visory forum, there was hope amongst the public that the Bistate Panel had the ‘No Build’ option. The no build option became increasingly in doubt and was eventually ruled out as an option.

Anyone who has looked at the makeup of the Bistate panel would have concluded long ago that the No Build option was doomed to fail. This is the situation when you take a stand on a questionable issue and then have to back away from it. For example Chicago’s panel members, like William Daley, Mayor Daley’s brother. (Is this nepotism, or what?) Bill Daley is presi- dent and CEO of Amal- gamated Trust And Savings Bank. (Hmmm, don’t banks usually finan- cially construct?) Or what about Bob Healy another Chicago member who is also the president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Could you im-agine him saying, “Let’s get rid of the no build option, this area doesn’t need any more jobs.” Indiana’s David Bohc- nowski, another Bistate member is also President

Weekend College has been successful in drawing students who had never at- tended GSU before and en- tered the program. The only drawback seems to be slighted is high

Weekend College has been successful in drawing students who had never at- tended GSU before and en- tered the program. The only drawback seems to be high tuition for those who are not enrolled in the program. This has led to a decrease in attendance. However, the program has continued to be successful and is looking forward to the future.

Students Pleased With Weekend College

Nearly 700 students are enrolled in college courses because of "Weekend Col- lege" at Governors State University.

Weekend College program began in the fall of 1989, allows students to en- roll in Friday evening and Saturday morning and after- noon classes, and a limited number of weekday classes.

In a survey of more than 200 Weekend College stu- dents conducted about the program were overwhel- mingly favorable. "This is a flexible program for working adults," one student wrote. Another commented that Weekend College is a great alternative to coming here after work, and it's been given me incentive to complete my degree."
The Good Old Days
by Laura Hays

My daughter asked me not long ago how much it cost to rent a video when I was her age. I told her that we didn’t have video recorders way back then, she gave me an incredulous look. When we went on to explain about black- and white sets, rabbit ear antennas and choosing from a mere three or four channels, she was amazed and then said “You had it easy that!”

Things have changed since we Baby Boomers were small. There have, of course, been some obvious changes like the Cold War is over, men have walked on the moon, and computers run many homes and businesses. Considering that, when I was kids

The Daley Players To Present

"Steel Magnolias"

The Daley Players present Robert Harling’s, STEEL MAGNOLIAS,” Thursdays, February 28th and 28th at 7:30 p.m., Fridays, February 21st and 21st at 7:30 p.m., and on Saturdays, February 22nd and 28th at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Theater on the Richard J. Daley College Campus, 7368 South Pilsudski Rd, Chicago. Tickets are $180L96 for a lifetime of Business and Public

Manilow took on his father’s work in an effort to keep this new community going. He became best friends with Governors State University’s first president, Bill Engbretson. They would go to dinner every two weeks and plan. Engbretson said: “We would dream together,” the president recalls. “I don’t think I’ve had as much fun with anyone else.”

The proceeds from this event were donated to the Spastic Children’s Research Foundation. Circle “K” sponsors numerous fundraisers throughout the year and the proceeds are donated to various charities. This year they raised $108,016 at this event.

The Daley College Cultural Arts Program, thus Saturday tickets are $10.00.

Ticket reservations can be made by calling (312) 755-3000 Ext. 260 before 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Circle ‘K’ News

Circle “K” is the college e-class of the Kiwanis. It is a student organization chartered through the Office of Student Life.

This year the GUI chapter was chosen to host for the 14th Annual Holiday Bazaar.

The dance covered the Illinois-East Iowa district although others were invited. The event was held on February 16, 1992 at the Ramada Inn in Homewood, Illinois. There was dancing from 6 p.m. until midnight.

The proceeds from this event were donated to the Spartan Fraternity.

The members of the Circle “K” each donated a toy and asked students to do the same. The winner of the raffle was the smiles on the faces of the children as they received the toys.

Northwestern Business College offers an education that will increase your options and help you succeed in the business world of today and tomorrow. Northwestern Business College is a place where each student can make a difference. With a strong curriculum and one-on-one teaching, we encourage students to think, communicate and grow. Perhaps most important, you will be part of a community that has made a serious commitment to your hopes and your achievements.
literary tremendous audience from the Guggenheim Fellowship. The novel. during its stay at the Small Business Development Center, into starting a business. The staff sessions in poetry, fiction and non-fiction techniques with free renown Chicago writers - fiction writers David Michael Kaplan and Angela Jackson, poets Edward Hirsch and Li Young Lee, and essayist S.L. Wisenberg. Several segments of the work-week program are open to the public. This year's program begins with a 5 p.m. reception Friday, Feb. 21, for photographer Lynn Brown whose 40 photographs and found art will be on display in the GSI Infinity Gallery. At 7:30 p.m. that evening, Kaplan and Jackson will read selections from their works. Lee, Wisenberg and Hirsch will read at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22. The best works of workshop participants will be read at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23. Workshop organizer Dr. Deborah Hollinger, coordinator of the English and rhetoric at GSI, has added a new segment to this year's workshop. Award-winning essayist S.L. Wisenberg will lead a workshop in writing short fiction and non-fiction pieces. Last year's workshops had a tremendous annunciation from the Guggenheim Fellowship. The novel. But we also had people from the downtown area and northern suburbs. And even from Michigan," she said, "we had one woman who had received a Guggenheim Fellowship and a Guggenheim Fellowship program when she was in high school in Japan and who arrived at her home to see him read his own works. Hirsch, has published three books of poems, and he has received literary acclaim and top awards. He also received a National Endowment for the Arts, the Guggenheim Fellowship and a Guggenheim Fellowship. Jackson is a respected poet and fiction writer. Part of her first novel, "Lethal Weather," was published as "And All These Roads Be Luminous: Poems 1989-1990" by Third World Press.

Kaplan's fiction has appeared in numerous periodicals, literary magazines and anthologies and has won him numerous awards. He has received writing fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown and the Illinois and Pennsylvania Arts Councils. Peloe was born in Indonesia for non-credit. For more information on the workshops when she was in high school our school of the Art Institute.

"There's an eerie moon tonight," is a strange thing for a giant man from the south to say, if you have already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood.

"There's an eerie moon tonight," is a strange thing for a giant man from the south to say, if you have already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood. just couldn't help himself. After all, the moon did look kind of eerie. It was the middle of the country. Now perhaps, I may find that I am not a giant man from the south who has already committed yourself to his murder, then perhaps you have committed your own sort of pugilistic persuasion. My guess is, Laughlin can gain some degree of his yearning for peace and brotherhood.
Stud enom and ambassadors sought to rep resent university

The decision to finish a degree or continue one’s education involves personal, professional, and financial considerations, as any GSU student can testify. And while the considerations, as any student can attest, are many—such as transfer of credits, concerns about the quality of the campus and its programs, and the anxiety which can accompany the decision to make a change—the prospective student’s concerns about the campus and its programs, and the anxiety which can accompany the decision to make a change—the prospective student’s con-

Student ambassadors sought to represent university

The decision to finish a degree or continue one’s education involves personal, professional, and financial considerations, as any GSU student can testify. And while the considerations, as any student can attest, are many—such as transfer of credits, concerns about the quality of the campus and its programs, and the anxiety which can accompany the decision to make a change—the prospective student’s con-

Student ambassadors sought to represent university

The decision to finish a degree or continue one’s education involves personal, professional, and financial considerations, as any GSU student can testify. And while the considerations, as any student can attest, are many—such as transfer of credits, concerns about the quality of the campus and its programs, and the anxiety which can accompany the decision to make a change—the prospective student’s con-

Student ambassadors sought to represent university

The decision to finish a degree or continue one’s education involves personal, professional, and financial considerations, as any GSU student can testify. And while the considerations, as any student can attest, are many—such as transfer of credits, concerns about the quality of the campus and its programs, and the anxiety which can accompany the decision to make a change—the prospective student’s con-
Help

GSU Students and Interns Can Serve on (ISPA) Board

by Anisa Hussain

Governors State University has the largest School Psychology Master of Arts Program in Illinois with current enrollment of approximately 168 students. This is only befitting that three out of the four students/interns on the Illinois School Psychologists Association (ISPA) Governing Board are GSU students. These Governing Board members are Student Representative Anisa Hussain, and Intern Representatives Jennie Probst and Joan Lilie. The main responsibility of these representatives is to act as liaisons between students, interns and the ISPA Board.

The goals of ISPA include:

to serve the mental health and educational needs of all children and youth.

Two-Day Workshop on Marriage Offered

UNIVERSITY PARK - A tering and marriage across the board happen. Couples work at it.

"Time for Marital Enrichment," a two-day workshop at Governors State University Feb. 14 and 28, will offer married people insights into how to fulfill their marriages and keep them strong.

"Divorce statistics are staggering," Dr. Jon Carlson says. "Estimates are that nearly two-thirds of all people married today can expect to be divorced or separated in the future. People in second marriages can expect that statistic to increase by 25 percent."

This situation has reached epidemic proportions, and appropriate interventions need to be made," he warns.

The Professor of psychology at GSU, and a practicing marriage counselor, will lead the workshop.

During the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. sessions, he will recommend small but meaningful changes in daily lifestyles that will draw the marriage partners closer together. The fee for this workshop is $80 or $80 per couple. The course also can be taken for college credit. To register, call the GSU Office of Conferences and Workshops at (708) 534-5000, extension 2209.

Anisa Hussain

February 6, 1992