University Park, IL — Sitting across the table from Brian Owens, one might get the feeling of conversing with — as some say — an old soul. Owens, who has performed at the White House before the First Lady Michelle Obama, dazzles audiences with performances that are full of soul and love well beyond his peers of today.

Now, you can see him live at GSU's Center for Performing Arts for a pre-Valentine's weekend celebration on February 9 at 8 p.m., perfect for sweethearts, singles, or soul fans.

At its heart, Owens' show is about "preservation; it's a matter of upholding the tradition of true soul music that is so desperately needed in our culture today," he says. Drawing inspiration from legends Sam Cooke, Curtis Mayfield and Marvin Gaye, this Ferguson, Missouri native knows how to spread his love of soul music. Owens and his father Thomas Owens' rendition of Sam Cooke's classic, "A Change is Gonna Come" went viral on YouTube and has been seen by over 13 million people. A versatile performer, his latest album, SOUL OF CASH (2017) features Owen performing songs made famous by country music icon Johnny Cash.

Presenter Paul K. Reuter of the Sheldon Arts Foundation said, "Brian Owens is one of the most talented vocalists I know. He has the ability to connect with his audience, bringing everyone together in a deep and personal way. A great musician, a great entertainer and a great person!"
