Supervision of Practica and Other Capstone Courses in Graduate Degree Programs

It is within practica, internships, and other capstone courses that graduate students are asked to demonstrate their ability to apply knowledge and skills acquired during the preceding coursework. Graduate-program faculty must have the opportunity to assess students at the point of culminating graduate coursework/activities. Therefore, the Faculty Senate of Governors State University believes only tenured, tenure-track, and full-time lecturers should act as instructors/ supervisors in such courses. Exceptions should be made only with the consent of the tenured and tenure-track faculty members of the program involved.
