Gun control at the center of Second Congressional District debate

By Corrie Gray
Associate Editor

Democratic candidates for Illinois’ vacant Second District Congressional seat participated in a forum at GSU’s Center for Performing Arts on February 7. Political analyst Mike Flannery of Fox Chicago moderated the event and was joined by Alderman Anthony Beale (Chicago), Robin Kelly (Matteson), Anthony Williams (Dolton), Gregory Haynes (Lynwood), Charles Rayburn (Dolton), Fatimah Muhammad (Chicago), Debbie Halvorson (Crete), Larry Pickens (Chicago), Victor Johnson (Country Club Hills), and Toi Hutchinson (Olympia Fields).

Each of the candidates was given the opportunity to voice their position on various issues including health care, energy, the economy, immigration, and gun control.

Last month, President Obama unveiled a proposal aimed at strengthening gun control. The proposal includes universal background checks for all gun buyers and an all-out ban on “military style” assault weapons.

“No law can prevent every senseless act, but laws can be valuable if it can prevent one attack. If there is even one life that can be saved, we’ve got an obligation to try it,” said Obama.

According to a recent New York Times article, Chicago recorded 18 homicides within the first 10 days of 2013, and the city is on track to outpace New York, Los Angeles, and some other large cities in homicides.

In light of Chicago’s recent struggles with gun violence and its having one of the highest violent crime rates in the country, the candidates were asked whether or not they would support a ban on assault weapons. At a time when many are predicting that conceal and carry laws will be enacted in Illinois, former state of Illinois representative Robin Kelly voiced her objection.

“When will we say enough is enough with all the killing in Chicago?” asked Kelly.

In the near future, campus police in Illinois may not be the only ones allowed to have guns on university campuses.

In December 2012, federal courts struck down a ban that prohibited citizens of Illinois from carrying concealed weapons. The ruling gave lawmakers 180 days to write rules and laws to allow concealed carry in Illinois. Illinois is the only state that has a ban on carrying concealed weapons. Under the Second Amendment, federal courts determined the ban to be unconstitutional.

This allows citizens to carry weapons in public settings such as malls, restaurants, movie theaters and university campuses. The ruling states that you have just as much of a right to protect yourself outside of your home as you do inside.

The possibility of guns on the campus of Governors State University is something that students have to be conscious of. So how do students feel about their classmates or teachers bringing guns into a classroom or lecture?

Mike Brittain, a Media Communications major, thinks that concealed carry is not the answer. He also believes that there needs to be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“If I saw a student with a concealed weapon, I would be worried,” said Brittain.

If GSU President Elaine Maimon has her way there will be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“After the shooting in Aurora, I thought we needed to do something,” said Maimon.

The state of the comics industry

Story pg 6

By Ryan O’Neill
Contributing Writer

In the near future, campus police in Illinois may not be the only ones allowed to have guns on university campuses.

In December 2012, federal courts struck down a ban that prohibited citizens of Illinois from carrying concealed weapons. The ruling gave lawmakers 180 days to write rules and laws to allow concealed carry in Illinois. Illinois is the only state that has a ban on carrying concealed weapons. Under the Second Amendment, federal courts determined the ban to be unconstitutional.

This allows citizens to carry weapons in public settings such as malls, restaurants, movie theaters and university campuses. The ruling states that you have just as much of a right to protect yourself outside of your home as you do inside.

The possibility of guns on the campus of Governors State University is something that students have to be conscious of. So how do students feel about their classmates or teachers bringing guns into a classroom or lecture?

Mike Brittain, a Media Communications major, thinks that concealed carry is not the answer. He also believes that there needs to be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“If I saw a student with a concealed weapon, I would be worried,” said Brittain.

Rachael Foster, a Communications Disorder major, believes that those who decide to carry concealed weapons need to be responsible.

“The only people who could stop bad guys with guns are good guys with guns,” said Foster, quoting from a speech by National Rifle Association Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre.

If GSU President Elaine Maimon has her way there will be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“After the shooting in Aurora, I thought we needed to do something,” said Maimon.

The state of the comics industry

Story pg 6

By Ryan O’Neill
Contributing Writer

In the near future, campus police in Illinois may not be the only ones allowed to have guns on university campuses.

In December 2012, federal courts struck down a ban that prohibited citizens of Illinois from carrying concealed weapons. The ruling gave lawmakers 180 days to write rules and laws to allow concealed carry in Illinois. Illinois is the only state that has a ban on carrying concealed weapons. Under the Second Amendment, federal courts determined the ban to be unconstitutional.

This allows citizens to carry weapons in public settings such as malls, restaurants, movie theaters and university campuses. The ruling states that you have just as much of a right to protect yourself outside of your home as you do inside.

The possibility of guns on the campus of Governors State University is something that students have to be conscious of. So how do students feel about their classmates or teachers bringing guns into a classroom or lecture?

Mike Brittain, a Media Communications major, thinks that concealed carry is not the answer. He also believes that there needs to be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“If I saw a student with a concealed weapon, I would be worried,” said Brittain.

Rachael Foster, a Communications Disorder major, believes that those who decide to carry concealed weapons need to be responsible.

“The only people who could stop bad guys with guns are good guys with guns,” said Foster, quoting from a speech by National Rifle Association Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre.

If GSU President Elaine Maimon has her way there will be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“After the shooting in Aurora, I thought we needed to do something,” said Maimon.

The state of the comics industry

Story pg 6

By Ryan O’Neill
Contributing Writer

In the near future, campus police in Illinois may not be the only ones allowed to have guns on university campuses.

In December 2012, federal courts struck down a ban that prohibited citizens of Illinois from carrying concealed weapons. The ruling gave lawmakers 180 days to write rules and laws to allow concealed carry in Illinois. Illinois is the only state that has a ban on carrying concealed weapons. Under the Second Amendment, federal courts determined the ban to be unconstitutional.

This allows citizens to carry weapons in public settings such as malls, restaurants, movie theaters and university campuses. The ruling states that you have just as much of a right to protect yourself outside of your home as you do inside.

The possibility of guns on the campus of Governors State University is something that students have to be conscious of. So how do students feel about their classmates or teachers bringing guns into a classroom or lecture?

Mike Brittain, a Media Communications major, thinks that concealed carry is not the answer. He also believes that there needs to be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“If I saw a student with a concealed weapon, I would be worried,” said Brittain.

Rachael Foster, a Communications Disorder major, believes that those who decide to carry concealed weapons need to be responsible.

“The only people who could stop bad guys with guns are good guys with guns,” said Foster, quoting from a speech by National Rifle Association Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre.

If GSU President Elaine Maimon has her way there will be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“After the shooting in Aurora, I thought we needed to do something,” said Maimon.

The state of the comics industry

Story pg 6

By Ryan O’Neill
Contributing Writer

In the near future, campus police in Illinois may not be the only ones allowed to have guns on university campuses.

In December 2012, federal courts struck down a ban that prohibited citizens of Illinois from carrying concealed weapons. The ruling gave lawmakers 180 days to write rules and laws to allow concealed carry in Illinois. Illinois is the only state that has a ban on carrying concealed weapons. Under the Second Amendment, federal courts determined the ban to be unconstitutional.

This allows citizens to carry weapons in public settings such as malls, restaurants, movie theaters and university campuses. The ruling states that you have just as much of a right to protect yourself outside of your home as you do inside.

The possibility of guns on the campus of Governors State University is something that students have to be conscious of. So how do students feel about their classmates or teachers bringing guns into a classroom or lecture?

Mike Brittain, a Media Communications major, thinks that concealed carry is not the answer. He also believes that there needs to be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“If I saw a student with a concealed weapon, I would be worried,” said Brittain.

Rachael Foster, a Communications Disorder major, believes that those who decide to carry concealed weapons need to be responsible.

“The only people who could stop bad guys with guns are good guys with guns,” said Foster, quoting from a speech by National Rifle Association Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre.

If GSU President Elaine Maimon has her way there will be stricter gun laws and background checks.

“After the shooting in Aurora, I thought we needed to do something,” said Maimon.
For those who need a helping hand...

In the fall of 2010, the average age of students attending Governors State University was 34. Though we can assume that the average age at the university will drop once we accept freshmen on our campus in 2014, we still currently have a large number of adult students enrolled in classes at GSU. Our university is known for its diversity in a variety of categories, including age, race, cultural and socio-economic backgrounds. Even though we are all fortunate to receive quality education at the most affordable public institution of higher education in Illinois, sometimes being a college student can be daunting, stressful, and financially challenging – especially in today’s economy.

That is why GSU’s Student Senate and Student Life established the GSU Food Pantry, which is available to all GSU students. The 1st and 3rd Monday of each month, students need only to show their student ID to receive a bag of groceries to help reduce stress and financial burdens. The Food Pantry is located in A2141, and operates from 12 Noon to 2 pm, and 4 to 6 pm. If you are not in need of food assistance, please feel free to donate non-perishable items to help us accomplish our mission of taking a stand against hunger, and helping students excel in college. Donations can be dropped off in the food bin outside the Food Pantry, or in the Office of Student Life, located in A2100.

Would you like to do more to support the missions of the Student Senate? Why not become a senator yourself? Time is running out to submit election packets to run in the Senator elections. Stop by Student Life on the second floor of the A building (A2100) to pick up a packet. You can also download the packet on the Student Senate website at www.govst.edu/studentsenate. Completed packets are due on February 21st!

Would you like to know more about the Student Senate goals and accomplishments? Visit us on our Facebook page to find out more information about current Senate events and activities.

Kayla Randolph-Clark
Illinois Board of Higher Education
GSU Student Representative

Do you have what it takes to win the first ever Phoenix Comic Strip Contest?

Calling all artists and cartoon enthusiasts!

Have you ever wanted to have your very own comic strip published? Now is your chance!

This semester, The Phoenix is hosting its’ first-ever Comic Strip Contest. Every issue, on page 8, The Phoenix runs cartoons by Jorge Cham of PHD Comics, and Randall Munroe of XKCD. Comics. We believe that there are many creative, funny, and talented students here at GSU that deserve a chance to have their own comic strip published on page 8.

So, if you consider yourself an artist and have a great sense of humor, we want to see your work! Interested contestants should email their comics to the Phoenix at phoenix@govst.edu. Eligible cartoons must be received no later than Saturday, March 9 at 11:59pm CDT.

In addition to having their winning cartoon published in the April 3 issue, the winner of the Comic Strip Contest will be allowed to have their comic published in the Phoenix as long as they are a student at GSU.

There are a few rules for this contest, which are as follows:

-All entries must be original work of the artist (NO PLAGIARISM)
-All entries must be free of offensive material.
-Anything containing curse words, graphic sexual content, or anything else which could be considered offensive will be automatically disqualified from the contest.

What kind of cartoons are we looking for? Whatever your imagination can come up with! So come on, GSU, show us what you got!
GSU honors its African-American researchers

By Andrew Kriz
Contributing Writer

As part of celebrating Black History Month, Governors State University hosted its third annual gathering for recognizing the school’s African American researchers February 13 in a packed Engbretson Hall.

Each of the guests who spoke in front of the audience were GSU graduates or professors and walked the guests through their latest accomplishments in their respective fields.

Dr. Giesela Grumbach began the gathering with a story of her volunteer experience at the Pace Institute at the Cook County jail where she observed inmates receiving counseling and an education. What stood out was there were no females in the programs.

From that experience she would find the inspiration for her dissertation as a doctoral candidate as she investigated what happened as mothers returned from prison back to mothering.

“We have a lot of data about crime, prison, and parenting but not about the transition back into the maternal role. Currently African American women make up 25.4 percent of the total prison population, which is less than 14 percent of the women in the United States. It’s an overrepresentation which we can thank Reagan for,” said Grumbach, who teaches in the Social Work department.

Her research has found most women in prisons are incarcerated based on non-violent crimes with a majority due to drug abuse.

The second half of her work will be interviewing mothers as they return home to their children and how, if at all, their identity had changed.

Associate Professor of Public Administration Mary Bruce explored how preparedness levels over the expected four out of five readiness level. Illinois law enforcement agencies are more apt to respond to blizzards, tornadoes, and flooding, which were the highest ranked on the survey, while terrorist attacks, hostage situations, and hazardous material removal were the lowest ranked.

“It is not surprising that the larger cities responded with a higher response level as they have more resources than their rural counterparts,” said Bruce.

Dr. Lorri Glass, Associate Professor of Social Work, based her 2007 research on the help-seeking behavior of African American women after being involved with a crime or through trauma.

“I saw lots of strength from these women,” Glass said. “They rely on others, their support groups, or they didn’t think they needed help.”

She also noted that the programs themselves might not be relevant to the women’s needs, or they avoided seeking help due to the negative social stigma mental health care has received over the years. Her current project is interviewing female veterans who were sexually abused while serving in the military.

Dr. Joseph Day, Assistant Professor of Community Health, served as coordinator for a randomized controlled treatment program for schools in the Chicagoland area which focused on the theory of positive action, which believes a child who is raised in a supportive environment will fare better in school and have better behavior then a child who did not.

Students who took part in the positive action portion were surrounded by role models, greeted in the morning, and were praised for their efforts beginning in the third grade and terminating in the seventh grade.

Day’s experiment showed that kids who were constantly encouraged did perform better and had higher self-esteem.

“We’d ask kids in an assembly about their homes, life style, and if there were any crimes they saw since this study spanned across the boundaries of poor and rich. What came out of this was that the resources kids have do matter, positive adults change lives, and stress does impact their development,” Day explained.

Associate Professor of Management Christopher Anne Robinson-Easley spoke of her recently published book which is geared towards preparing people for today’s job market.

“I’ve been in the business world for 22 years and in today’s global job market people haven’t changed to meet the new demands brought on by our competition. People are being pushed out of their jobs here by people in India not because the labor is cheaper but because their quality of education and when they start is much better and earlier than ours. Right now our schools are teaching how to write business proposals which students should already know how to do while other countries are preparing their students for the global market,” said Robinson-Easley.

Her book tackled the issue of employees not being skilled enough and expected to do work they had not received schooling for, as well as the miscommunication employers exhibit by not properly explaining what they expect out of new hires.

Dr. Crystal Blount, who teaches psychology, showcased her initiative called “Where are the Women?” which tasked students to select female pioneers in their respective fields who have not been recognized by the academic community and write research papers on their contributions.

“The project has led to some of my students advocating these women be added into the text books and it has inspired students to make a difference, respect themselves, and increase their engagement in the classroom,” said Blount.

Associate Professor of Occupational Therapy Cynthia Carr debunked what “active participation” was in the classroom by switching the roles of educator and student for a semester.

In her study, she became the learner and had the students tell her what participation looks like in the classroom via verbal activity and nonverbal signals to develop a better definition.
Survey says, café in need of improvement

By Andrew Kriz
Contributing Writer

No one expects the university cafeteria to compare to the dining room at The Ritz, but students faculty and staff are hoping the GSU cafeteria will get fired up for improvements following an online survey over winter break.

Of the 532 respondents to the survey about half were students, with the other half being faculty, staff and administrators. Students were a bit more positive with their feedback about the food, with 46 percent saying they were satisfied or very satisfied with the offerings.

The cafeteria will get fired up for improvements following an online survey over winter break.

Nearly all agree there’s plenty of room for improvement and a need to appeal to the diverse campus community. Changes are necessary since the cafe is the most convenient option for almost everyone at GSU.

The biggest complaint was that the café, which is operated by Food Services Incorporated (FSI), was understaffed at times during the busiest hours, which resulted in slow service. The lack of a varied selection on the menu, as well as prices being too high for what is offered, were also among the biggest complaints cited by the survey.

Kevin Smith, a student, rated the café as ‘average’ giving it a passing grade for service.

“It’s convenient and better this year. They’ve improved the salad bar since it’s cheaper, healthier, and there are more choices but the big rush before class is still a problem,” he said. “Both lanes aren’t open and it takes too long to get food since there isn’t enough staff for the rush. If they added something like a fast food lane that could help.”

Many who chose not to eat at the café said they brought food from home as their primary meal source while others drove to fast food restaurants or opted to eat out of the vending machines.

GSU starts Student Concerns Program

By Ryan O’Neill
Contributing Writer

Have you ever wanted to help a student you thought may be distressed, or whose behavior is of concern, but did not know how to help? The Office of the Dean of Students has launched the Student Concerns Program in an effort to help students achieve their academic and personal goals. The program was designed to detect early signs of distress in a student. By identifying early signs of concern in a student, the best resources can be applied to help the student. The program offers a solution to people that want to help, but do not know how. The program is also called the “Care Program” or “Early Alert Program” at other campus universities.

The Student Concerns Program at Governors State University differs from the Campus Threat Assessment Team (CTAT). Only threats deemed a threat to the campus will be reported immediately to CTAT. The Student Concerns program is an early detection program that depends on faculty, staff and student participation to identify students who need proactive outreach.

Tamekia Scott, the case manager of the program, identified the areas where students are most likely to express concern. Some of the changes included expanding the menu to include chicken wings, clam strips, zucchini strips, and promoting a monthly drink special at Starbucks.

Thirty-six percent of the staff who responded reported being either “very satisfied or satisfied”, the faculty gave a 35 percent, and only 31 percent of administrators deemed the food satisfactory. Those numbers hold significant weight as the café’s largest audience is administrators and faculty members according to the results.

Some improvements have already been made since the survey results were analyzed by Betsy Joseph, Director of Auxiliary Services. Some of the changes included expanding the menu to include chicken wings, clam strips, zucchini strips, and promoting a monthly drink special at Starbucks.

GSU’s Student Occupational Therapy Association (SOTA) will host a university-wide Blood Drive on Monday, February 25, 2013, from 3 to 7 p.m. in the E Lounge.

For more information, or to sign up to donate, contact Kim Tate at ktate@student.govst.edu

Give Blood!

GSU’s Student Occupational Therapy Association (SOTA) will host a university-wide Blood Drive on Monday, February 25, 2013, from 3 to 7 p.m. in the E Lounge.

For more information, or to sign up to donate, contact Kim Tate at ktate@student.govst.edu

Give Blood!

GSU’s Student Occupational Therapy Association (SOTA) will host a university-wide Blood Drive on Monday, February 25, 2013, from 3 to 7 p.m. in the E Lounge.

For more information, or to sign up to donate, contact Kim Tate at ktate@student.govst.edu
Second district debate  continued from pg 1

Chicago and all the mass murders around the country,” said Kelly. “It takes a village, access to mental healthcare, after school programs, boys and girls clubs. It takes parents knowing where their kids are and good jobs so that people don’t have to look at other means of support.”

State senator Toi Hutchinson agreed and said she believes that the country is calling for common sense safety legislation right now. “Nine out of every 10 Americans understand that with rights come responsibilities. We are not going after Second Amendment rights, we are actually going after the safety of our entire community,” said Hutchinson.

Both Kelly and Hutchinson announced that they will stand firmly with the President and support his agenda on gun control.

Ninth Ward Alderman Anthony Beale also called for tougher restrictions and gun laws. Beale believes that the second-tier gun exchange poses the biggest problem. “If you have a car and sell that car you have to transfer the title. We should have the same thing with guns so we can track the guns whereabouts,” said Beale.

Former U.S. Representative Debbie Halvorson supports universal background checks but expressed her opposition to an assault weapons ban. She put forward that an honest conversation on the culture of violence is needed. “It is not just about guns…We need to talk about the fact that the state has cut 187 million dollars out of the mental health budget, nobody is talking about that. We also need to talk about the fact that the city has closed down half of the mental health facilities in the city,” said Halvorson, adding, “I refuse to support any wide ranging law that is going to harm a law abiding citizen until we do something that is going to go after the criminal.”

Other candidates communicated more of a moderate stance. Fatimah Muhammad believes that gun laws can be structured similarly to motor vehicle laws. “We have a lot of policies and rules about where we can drive an 18-wheeler truck or a tractor, so gun use and ownership should be related to where you are. In an urban area, there is really no need for high capacity weapons,” said Muhammad.

The Congressional seat in Illinois’ Second District was held for 17 years by Jesse Jackson Jr., a Chicago Democrat who resigned in November, citing health reasons.

The primary election takes place on February 26, with the special election following on April 9. There are currently 16 candidates vying for the congressional seat, 12 Democrats and four Republicans.
The state of the comics industry

By Adam Ebert
Contributing Writer

In 2012, Marvel’s movie adaptation of The Avengers had an overall box office take of 1.5 billion dollars, while DC Comics’ The Dark Knight Rises took in 1.08 billion at the box office. Comics, originally an industry found solely in print, have found their footing in the ever-changing world of mass media and technology.

In yesteryear, children would buy comics depicting their favorite heroes at the local drugstore. Soon after, comic book stores became the place children would buy their comics. As the direct market comic shops began to thrive, the drugstore spinner slowly faded into obscurity. More and more fans were flocking to comic book stores every week to pick up the newest comics. Comic publishing companies began to work hand-in-hand with distributing comics, and looked to innovate the relationship between producer, seller, and consumer. Marvel, DC, and other companies then soon branched out into other forms of media. Television shows and video games were perhaps the first and most effective types of expansion. Heroes such as Superman, Batman, and Spider-Man proved very successful in comic book-related movies began to flood the film industry. These films found box office success, and were also adored by film critics and fans alike. Comic book characters soon found success in every form of media. So, can it be assumed that the comics industry itself is booming? Yes and no.

In 2002, comic companies and stores started Free Comic Book Day. The event is held annually on the first Saturday of May and looks to entice current readers, as well as attract old and new readers, with free comics. The added incentive is that Free Comic Book Day generally sync up with the release of comic book movie adaptations such as Iron Man, The Avengers, and Spider-Man 2. Comic shops jumped at the opportunity to bring in new readers who fell in love with the cinematic versions of the characters. However, while Free Comic Book Days have been successful overall, it has not attracted readers in the ways many wanted.

Patrick Hughes, co-owner and operator of Stand-Up Comics in Lansing, IL, spoke on the correlation of superhero films and new comic sales on a whole. “There was and there wasn’t...the comic book market did [very little to improve] when new movies came out. [However], the graphic novel market did do very well.”

Graphic novels offered the “DVD box set” alternative to single issue comic books, which appealed more to new readers than single comic serials. Graphic novels have boomed since the start of this century, attracting new followers, with many dominating the New York Times Best Seller Lists. Television and movie media have followed, adapting popular graphic novels like Watchmen and The Walking Dead.

New digital technology has also impacted the comics market. With the invention of such products as iPad, iPhone, and Kindle, comics are no longer restricted to paper. With apps like Comixology and the applications available directly from comic companies, comic books are now readily available at the touch of a finger. This increases convenience and access to readers, allowing them to simply download comics straight to a digital device. Digital distribution also reduces the cost of physical distribution. Thirty percent of the total comics market is now digital. Companies like Marvel have also begun placing codes for free digital copies on back of the printed single issues. This gives collectors the option to have both physical copies, as well as digital versions for their e-readers. In an effort for digital innovation to co-exist with comic book stores, retailers receive incentives when customers redeem their digital copies. While technology has forced many media formats into extinction, the digital and physical distribution of comics has been able to co-exist in a mutually beneficial way.

While many comic shops have closed in recent years, the ones still in existence have provided fans with a place of shared community. The digital age has made comics more easily accessible to readers and newcomers alike. As for single-issue comics, there is still a sense of nostalgia. Flipping through back issues, bagged and boarded, is still a unique experience. Many collectors still flock to comic book stores all across the country. The comics industry has made changes to adapt to the changing culture and market. If the focus remains on innovation, quality of product, and raised market awareness, the century-old comics market will be around for centuries to come.

Technology hype is overrated

By Steve Luzzo
Contributing Writer

I am a consumer. Odds are if you are reading this, you are also a consumer. Recently it occurred to me how heavily influenced we all are by print media and digital media. Actually, take anything and throw media behind it, and we are likely influenced by it. On a recent trip to a local big box electronics store, I realized that technology hype is overrated. The brand new Microsoft Surface Pro came out on February 9. I did not know much about what it really was until a day or two before its release, and that is only because I scoured every blog trying to read up on its capabilities. While the commercials did a good job of showing off Surface Pro, they did not do a good job of showing what it actually does. According to the commercial, it makes a clicking noise when the keyboard is connected, and will enable me to dance with all of my cool friends while also trading keyboards like baseball cards.

I came to realize that the idea of a tablet that can morph into a laptop is silly. In fact, the whole tablet market is silly right now. I know that millions of people own tablets and swear by how great they are. There are programs that are out there that are beneficial to a select few groups, such as teachers and video design folks. But at the end of the day, most people can’t use a “computer” tablet as more than anything but a glorified Smartphone.

As a consumer, I am choosing to wait for the tablet market to establish itself better. I want to wear a nice suit and show up to work with a tablet in hand that will actually serve a purpose. While the Surface Pro is cool, for the price that it is at I am better off buying myself a laptop. With the money I would be saving I could afford to buy the full edition of Office and take my fiancé out to dinner.

Disagree? Have something to say? Let’s hear you on Twitter @IntConnaGetIt.
By Jonathan Hutchinson
Contributing Writer

The Mindfulness and Psychotherapy Certificate Program is a new 18-credit hour multidisciplinary program offered by the College of Health and Human Services and the College of Education. It’s also the first program of its kind in the Midwest.

Four professors and clinicians were involved in the creation of the program, including Dr. Maristela Zell. “It was created with an enormous body of research. It will prepare post-master’s level practitioners and advanced graduate students to integrate mindfulness practice and theory into their clinical practice,” she said.

Dr. Zell said the program is unique in the Midwest and is committed to teaching those in the fields of social work, psychology and addictions counseling how to use mindfulness and meditation techniques to help their clients.

Studies have shown that practicing mindfulness and meditation has many benefits including lowering blood pressure, stabilizing emotions, and strengthening the immune system.

“Being mindful is being present with the decisions we make. Mindfulness helps us to be in the present,” Dr. Zell says.

She said mindfulness practices have a long history. The Buddhists have been using mindfulness techniques for more than 2500 years. But it has only been used in the United States for about 40 years.

According to Dr. Zell, the certificate in mindfulness studies will enable students to “implement mindfulness practices in clinical work.” It is applicable in all settings, she said, noting, “It will enhance your set of skills. It is another tool to help with what they already do.”

Dr. Zell explained what social workers can do with a certificate in mindfulness studies.

“Social workers can use mindfulness-based studies to help with problems, relationships, working with kids with special problems like ADHD,” she said. “It can help kids become more attentive, and many problems can be alleviated.”

She also added, “Research shows mindfulness can be used for that and social workers who work with people who are on drugs.”

Current master’s level GSU students enrolled in clinical programs in their final year of advanced practicum are eligible to enroll. In addition, those already working in the fields of social work, psychotherapy, addictions counseling, family therapy, and other health professional may also apply.

The deadline for applications is Feb. 22. For more information about mindfulness studies, e-mail Dr. Maristela Zell at mzell@govst.edu.

Concealed carry continued from pg 1

not be any guns toted around in backpacks and briefcases on campus.

Maimon wrote a column in the Northwest Indiana Times stating the importance for legislation that keeps guns off university campuses.

“Gun advocates argue that guns don’t kill people; people kill people. The truth of the matter is that people with guns kill people,” Maimon write in the column.

She states that student safety is first at GSU and the only firearms should be in the hands of officers trained to protect students. Maimon also believes that gun assailants are not deterred by the thought that innocent people might be armed.

“Research shows that armed civilians who are taken by surprise are more likely to injure innocent bystanders than they are to stop the perpetrator,” she said in her column.

James McGee, Chief of Police at GSU, also stated he opposes guns on campus. “I am totally against it,” said McGee. “Our officers go through numerous hours of training. There is a lack of training for citizens to carry and use weapons. They are required to go through very minimum training. Other than a required 8 hour course no other training is required.”

In the wake of recent U.S mass shootings, the argument is also being made that stricter guns laws and armed law-abiding citizens can prevent shootings.

According to Caron Jacobson of GSU’s Criminal Justice Department, believes that concealed carry does not prevent mass shootings. In the majority of recent mass shootings, the assailant didn’t have a concealed carry permit, and didn’t use a gun they owned.

“Laws that ban a behavior/action do not prevent it from happening when an individual has their mind set on committing the act banned,” said Jacobson.

As the concealed carry ruling goes through the legislative process, students at GSU should be aware that by fall semester the student sitting next to you might be packing more than just books in their backpack.

Sudoku solutions from pg 8

Crossword solutions from pg 8

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>3</th>
<th>7</th>
<th>1</th>
<th>5</th>
<th>9</th>
<th>2</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

M A S T S
A L L O T
S L A Y
N O D E
G U I L E
S A V E
G R I T
I M P E R S O N A L
R U L E

N E C K E R A S E R

W A R M D I E T T O T
A R E A G A T E A I S L E
S I N G L E T P A N A C E A
P A T I O E M I R T A N S

S S E A C E E R S T

F A L T E R G U N S
A L A R M O V E R A C T I N G
D A T A T I N E A R S O N
E M I T I O T A D E L T A

D O N E C L A N S K E E T

WHAT’S UP

GSU offers new certificate program
GSU Happenings

Taste of BSU - Soul Food Lunch ($5) February 20 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. Cafeteria Annex
Education Job and Internship Fair February 21 2 - 5 p.m. Hall of Governors
Graduate Business Program Information Session February 28 6 – 7:30 p.m. Cafeteria Annex
Natural Hair, Health, and Beauty Conference February 28 2 - 6 p.m. Hall of Governors
GSU Students on the Move; Civic Engagement in Action Presentation February 26 6 - 8 p.m. Engbreton Hall
Black History Month Film Series: "Crimson Tide" February 27 5 - 7:30 p.m. Engbreton Hall
GSU's First Black Women Rock Awards Ceremony February 28 7 - 9 p.m. Sherman Hall Sponsored by Student Life

XKCD: AIM Profile

CREATING AN AIM PROFILE:

HAVE FRIENDS?

YES

NO

HAVE MARRIAGE GOVERNMENT?

YES

NO

A PROFESSIONAL IS THE GREATEST MESSAGE OF LOVE

INSIDE JOKES:

A JOKED ABOUT IT?

LINK TO YOUR INDEED PAGE

“XKCD” is a webcomic of “romance, sarcasm, math, and language” run by Randall Munroe. To read the latest, head to xkcd.com

Show off your super talents!
The Phoenix is holding it’s first-ever Comic Strip Contest!
The winning comic strip will be featured in new issues of the Phoenix, every first and third Wednesday of the month! See page 2 for contest details.

Crossword

ACROSS
1. Sail supports
6. Competent
10. Bit of gossip
14. Bestow
15. Kill
16. Connecting point
17. Cunning
18. Rescue
19. Fortitude
20. Emotionless
22. Govern
23. Between the head and shoulders
24. Found at the end of a pencil
26. Not cool
30. At one time (archaic)
31. Preschooler
32. District
33. Way in
35. Passageway
39. Undershirt
41. Goddess of healing
43. Terrace
44. Arab chieftain
46. Bronzes
47. South southeast
49. Card with one symbol
50. At one time (archaic)
51. Hesitate
54. Weapons
56. Winglike
57. Overplaying
66. Send forth
67. Greek letter
69. Accomplished
70. Family group
71. Shooting sport

DOWN
1. Wise men
2. Astringent
3. Faux pas
4. Lacquered metalware
5. Threat
6. Partner
7. Bed covering
8. Magma
9. Shoelace hole
10. Gain favor
11. A ring-shaped surface
12. Ancient Roman magistrate
13. Gauge
21. Marsh plant
25. A soft sheepskin leather
26. Stingling insect
27. Diva's solo
28. Lease
29. Judge
34. Gastronomist
36. Stigma
37. Focusing glass
38. Where the sun rises
39. Fail to win
40. Sporting venue
42. Sporting venue
43. Deep purplish red
44. Arousing
51. Washed-out
52. San Antonio fort
53. Language of ancient Rome
55. Oodles
56. Six-stringed instrument
58. Five-sting guitar
59. Journey
60. Small island
61. Memo
62. Annoying insect

Sudoku

```plaintext
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
|   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
|   | 9 |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
|   |   | 4 | 6 | 3 |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
|   | 6 | 2 | 8 | 1 |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
| 3 | 4 | 2 | 7 |   |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
| 9 |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
| 2 | 5 |   |   | 3 | 7 |   | 1 | 9 |
+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+---+
```